May Return to War

By Ralph Heinzen
United Press Staff Writer

Vichy, April 28.—The Petain government tonight considered throwing France's overseas army back into the war in Africa, where British and "Free French" forces are attacking French Somaliland in a drive against the important port and railroad terminus of Djibouti.

French defense forces, ordered to resist, were said in an official announcement to be remaining "loyally" at their posts and to be refusing to enter into any agreement with the attacking "Free French" dissidents of Gen. Charles de Gaulle.

British warships were said to have appeared off Djibouti Sunday, completely blockading the port, in support of the land attack.

The Free French and British units were said to be spread all along Somaliland's southern frontier, trying to provoke the 2,800 French defense troops to desert.

Minor Clashes So Far

No Italian troops are involved, dispatches received here said, because the French have insisted upon handling full defense of the empire.

Thus far, it was said, there has been no serious fighting in the attack on France's East African colony, 250 miles northeast of Addis Ababa, where British armored units and Free French forces are attacking at two points.

A Free French column was said in an official announcement to be striking upon Daouankeh, on the Addis Ababa Railroad, 70 miles south of Djibouti, aided by British motorized units.

Urged by Axis

Another Free French force landed at the British Somaliland port of Zeila, on the Gulf of Aden, 40 miles below Djibouti, with the apparent intention of closing a pincers on Djibouti.

The news of the British-Free French attack was received as French military leaders seriously considered a plan of action to recapture France's African colonies lost to De Gaulle's forces and British troops in central Africa.

Germany and Italy, it was revealed, are urging France to drive the British and Free French from

Germans Mop Up in Greece; Berlin Hints Crete Is Next

Believe Only 'Policing' Is Necessary To Close Campaign in Peloponnesus

By the Associated Press

Berlin (Tuesday), April 29.—The Greek Island of Crete, new seat of the government which fled from Athens, apparently will be the next objective of the German army after the mopping-up campaign on the Greek mainland and in the Peloponnesus is completed.

Adolf Hitler's newspaper, Voelkischer Beobachter, answering British claims that the English fleet still would be able to dominate the southern exit of the Aegean Sea from bases on Crete, lends weight to this belief.

Crete, in German hands, also would spell great danger to British strongholds in Egypt, such as Alexandria, Port Said and the Suez Canal, it was pointed out.

Military reports said that German troops, cooperating with the "Reich's naval forces," occupied the Greek islands of Samothrace, Lemnos and Thasos, but did not reveal whether German surface craft succeeded in entering the Mediterranean, or whether submarines played a part in the operations.

Meanwhile, German bombers blasted British and Greek troops racing across the Peloponnesus for possible escape by sea.

British shipping losses off Greece were said to total 287,000 tons, or 25,000 tons more than were lost in the Dunkerque debacle a year ago. (Lloyd's has listed 443,904 tons of shipping lost in the Dunkerque withdrawal, of which 230,356 were British and the remainder were under Allied flags.)

Those tallies were chalked up by Nazi bombers in the last 11 days and another 400,000 tons of shipping was claimed to have been damaged.

Weekend British shipping losses were set at 13 ships totaling more than 53,000 tons, including a British cruiser.

Authorized circles did not attempt to estimate at this time British troop casualties in the Balkan

British Troops Hold Germans Outside Salum

Spearhead Locked With Axis Forces; Italians Lose Dessie

By the Associated Press

Cairo, April 28.—Advance units of a British armored division were reported in contact with Axis forces near Salum, Egypt, tonight as the North African front resumed the center of the stage in the Mediterranean war theater.

German-Italian units, British headquarters said, made little or no progress with the spearhead they have established 6 miles inside the Egyptian frontier, and in East Africa Axis forces suffered another setback with the fall of Dessie, Italian-Ethiopian stronghold.

British troops entered Dessie Sunday after a few hours of tough fighting at Kombolchia Pass, 14 miles south of the plateau city, informed military circles said.

(This supported London reports that the town was taken by forces operating from the British-held capital, Addis Ababa, although Dessie had been attacked from all sides.)

The pass was declared to have been fortified strongly and fiercely defended. Britons said the Fascists broke under repeated attacks and yielded the summit just as Italian reinforcements were sighted.

The British were said to have charged down the road and turned the reinforcements' forward march into a precipitate retreat.

With Dessie captured, there remained in Ethiopia only two major centers of Italian resistance, Gondar 250 miles northwest of Addis Ababa and 190 miles northwest of Dessie, and Jimma, 160 miles southwest of Addis Ababa.

Elsewhere on the African Front, the British continued to hold Tobruk, Libyan stronghold around which the Axis forces moved in their capture of Salum.

British military sources said that Axis forces had been in possession of Salum only since Saturday. (Axis reports have claimed the Egyptian frontier post for days.)

Lone Bomber Strafes Emden By Daylight

4 British Planes Lost in Crippling Of Nazi Destroyer

By the Associated Press

London, April 28.—The Royal Air Force, growing increasingly bold, sent a four-motored bomber diving and machine-gunning at the docks of Emden in a daylight attack today, while other swarms of planes battled two destroyers off the Dutch coast and left one of them "spouting a great volume of smoke," the British said tonight.

The attack on Emden was the second made in daylight by the British on Germany's large cities in as many days. Cologne, in the Rhineland, was raided Sunday, and loads of bombs dropped on a factory.

Today one of Britain's new Stirling bombers, capable of carrying a huge load of explosives, dropped heavy bombs on Emden, important northwestern German port and shipbuilding center, then came down to 1,500 feet and raked the docks with machine-gun fire, the air ministry said

Blenheim bombers made the attack on the destroyers, the air ministry said, diving into a "heavy storm of antiaircraft" fire when they sighted an escort of supply ships.

"Our bombers pressed home their attack from a very low altitude and

2 Sons of Belgian Premier Killed In Train Fire

London, April 28 (AP).—Six students of Ampleforth College, including two sons of Belgian Premier Hubert Pierlot, were reported killed today when they leaped from a blazing coach of the London-Newcastle express which caught fire near Claypole, Lincolnshire.

Seven others were injured among the 64 boys carried by the coach.

A third son of Pierlot, 13-year-old Gerard, was taken to a hospital.

The train was stopped after the fire was discovered and the crew checked the flames after they had spread to other cars.

Lindbergh Quits Army, Cites Roosevelt's Implied Criticism

By the Associated Press

New York, April 28.—Charles A. Lindbergh resigned today as colonel in the United States Army Air Corps Reserve because his commander in chief—President Roosevelt—had implied certain things about "my loyalty to my country, my motives and my character."

Thus, the thin young man who at 25 historically flew the Atlantic, and rose at once from captain to colonel, beseeched his Government at 39 to return him to private life because he had "no honorable alternative."

In a letter to President Roosevelt, Lindbergh took exception to "implications" he said the President uttered concerning him at last Friday's press conference.

In this conference the Chief Executive criticized the flier and others who say the Axis powers will defeat Great Britain. The President compared them to appeasers of Revolutionary and Civil War days who insisted that defeat was imminent and that peace should be sued for promptly.

The President thus "clearly implied," Lindbergh wrote, "that I am no longer of use to this country as a reserve officer."

He told his commander that he was "greatly disturbed" and that he had hoped he might "exercise my rights as an American citizen to place my viewpoint before the people of my country in time of peace, without giving up the privilege of

Have Faith, British Envoy Asks C. of C.

Sir Gerald Campbell Promises America His Nation Will Never Make a False Peace

Sir Gerald Campbell, the British Minister, last night pleaded for a continued American faith in Britain's ability to win the war and answered his nation's critics by declaring Great Britain never will make a "negotiated, false, inconclusive peace."

Speaking for his embattled country at an International Chamber of Commerce dinner at the Mayflower Hotel, he asked his audience to twist the meaning of an old song, "Will you love in December as you did in May?"

He said he hoped A[illegible]ans will "love us in May as [illegible]pe you will in December, ov[illegible]ting any shortcomings during this springtime of danger and difficulty."

Denies Allies Were Misled

Referring to a speech delivered in New York by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh last Wednesday—though not mentioning the flier by name—he denied that England had misinformed her European allies of the strength she could send them.

His address ended the first day's session of the annual meeting of the United States Chamber of Commerce which will continue through Thursday. An estimated 1,500 delegates, representing virtually all of the Chambers of Commerce of the Nation, are attending the convention.

H. R. MacMillan, president of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, also addressed the dinner gathering. Eliot Wadsworth, chairman of the American committee of the international organization, presided.

The British Minister declared, "With your help in the provision of equipment, we intend to be in a far better position than we are now, coming up towards the crest of the wave as our enemy starts to go down."

Army Fixed by France

Defending accusations of British military blunders, Sir Gerald said that the size of the British Expeditionary Force sent to France was fixed by the French general staff.

He added, "In honor bound those troops were sent to defend Belgium as others have since been sent to defend Norway and Greece—military blunders perhaps, but so was the charge of the Light Brigade at Balaclava, and we all learned at school how proud the British army and the British people were of the Light Brigade . . .

"It is surely our business to decide whether we are going to abandon the victims of German aggression in Europe whom we are pledged to free and whether we are going to hide our heads in shame and dishonor evermore."

He told the international organization that if England abandons her pledge to liberate Europe from slavery, "if we abandon what has

President Freezes Greek Assets In This Country

Copyright by New York Times

President Roosevelt signed an order yesterday freezing all Greek credits, investments and cash holdings in the United States, estimated to amount to between $40,000,000 and $50,000,000.

Secretary Morgenthau claimed "encouragement," meanwhile, for the Treasury's attitude on the foreign situation and particularly its proposal for a general use of the "freezing" power to combat the Axis powers on an economic basis. He made it obvious that the boost came from the State Department.

Greece became the fourteenth country to have her credits and investments in the United States placed under Government control as a result of the Axis conquests. With the Greek addition the total funds and credits so tied up amount to about $4,500,000,000.

Labor Board Upheld

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

The Supreme Court ruled yesterday that antiunion "discrimination in hiring is twin to discrimination in firing" and employers who discriminate against union applicants for jobs can be compelled to give "back pay."

The decision by Justice Frankfurter determined for the first time that an employer subject to the National Labor Relations Act may not refuse to hire employes solely because of their affiliations with a labor union.

The court upheld this principle as a unit but divided 5 to 2 on Justice Frankfurter's decision that the National Labor Relations Board can require that wages be paid from the time of rejection to men denied jobs because of union membership. Justice Roberts did not participate.

Labor Board Upheld

The ruling sustained the board's right to compel the Phelps Dodge Corporation to employ and give back pay to two men who sought employment at the company's copper mine at Bisbee, Ariz., but sent the matter back to the board to determine in each case that such orders are necessary to effectuate the policies of the Wagner Act.

"We do not intend to enter province that belongs to the board, nor do we do so," said Justice Frankfurter. "All we ask of the board is to give clear indication that it has exercised the discretion with which Congress has empowered it. This is to affirm most emphatically the authority of the board."

Hughes and Stone Dissent

The opinion upheld the power of the board to require reinstatement of wrongfully discharged employes even when they have obtained substantially equivalent employment elsewhere. This likewise was remanded to the board for a determination of whether "in employing that power the policies of the act would be enforced."

The dissenting opinion by Chief Justice Hughes and Justice Stone agreed that the company's refusal to hire two applicants for jobs because of their union membership was an unfair labor practice.

But Hughes and Stone took issue with the majority's reinstatement and back pay conclusions. The dissent, written by Stone, insisted

Cuba Detains Ship Flying U. S. Flag; Four Aboard Held

Havana, April 28 (AP).—The yacht Ezgoin, flying the American flag and carrying papers showing registry at Key West, Fla., was seized by the Cuban navy tonight and its crew of three men and a woman were brought here for investigation by immigration authorities.

The yacht was run into Batabano by the gunboat Cuba from the south coastal waters between Cuba and the Isle of Pines.

The crew refused to make any statement until permitted to see a United States consulate official here.

The yacht is equipped with two engines and has a speed of about 15 miles per hour. Naval officials reported it was provisioned for a long trip.

Overton Plan Hearings Put Off 2 Weeks

Leaders Delay Action, Despite Roosevelt's Blessing of Formula

A two-week delay in House consideration of the Overton formula to boost by $3,300,000 the Federal payment to the District government was decided upon by Congressional leaders yesterday after a conference with President Roosevelt.

The President, it was understood, told Senate Majority Leader Barkley and House Majority Leader McCormack that he was very much in favor of the bill and hoped it would pass.

The bill, written by Senator John H. Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, would base the annual Federal payment upon the percentage of United States land to the total District area. It has passed the Senate without objection and was favorably reported last week by the House District Committee.

Tough sledding for the bill, even with Administration support, was

Two men were severely injured in railroad accidents here yesterday.

James Clancy, 43, of 1619 Franklin Street Northeast, was found lying on the main line track of the Pennsylvania Railroad at the New York Avenue Bridge. He was taken to Emergency Hospital suffering from a compound fracture of the right arm and head injuries.

While coupling a freight train at the K and Thirty-fourth Street yards, Oscar Remsburg, 31, of Brunswick, Md., had his right arm crushed.

Trade Groups Urge Broader Tax Base

Morgenthau Opposes Plan for Excise Taxes on Food

Representatives of two New York business groups yesterday asked the Ways and Means Committee to broaden the tax base to tap lower incomes, as Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau struck at joint committee suggestions for excises on foods.

Taxes on coffee, tea, sugar and cocoa, included in a list, made public by experts of the Congressional Joint Committee on Internal Revenue, Morgenthau declared would tax "the poor man's table."

Before the Ways and Means Committee in public hearings meanwhile went M. L. Seidman, of the taxation committee of the New York Board of Trade, to urge Congress to dig deeper into lower incomes for revenue. The Treasury's proposed new income surtaxes start at present exemption levels.

Instead, Seidman recommended exemptions cut from $2,000 to $1,600 for married persons; reduced from $800 to $500 for single persons, and sliced from $400 to $250 for each dependent. He told reporters this should raise $2,000,000,000 in additional revenue.

Later W. J. Schieffelin, jr., tax chairman of the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York, recommended imposition of either a general retail sales tax or a special defense tax collected at the source on all gross incomes paid to individuals.

Schieffelin also favored lowering of income tax exemptions, an increase in the normal income tax rate from 4 to 6 per cent, and increase in the normal tax on corporations from 24 to 30 per cent.

He favored abolition of the capital stock tax and the declared value

'Goblin' Plan Gives Up Ghost

House Kills D. C. Blackout Bill, Denounced as 'War Hysteria'

By Robert DeVore
Post Staff Writer

After nearly two hours of vigorous, sometimes satirical debate, marked by cries of "war hysteria" and "goblin bill," the House yesterday killed legislation to provide blackout experience for the National Capital and its Maryland and Virginia suburbs.

The vote was 171 to 117 against a bill written by Representative Jennings Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, and unanimously backed by the membership of his House District Committee.

The attack on the bill was led by Hamilton Fish (Republican), of New York, stanch House isolationist. Fish's principal weapon was satire. He brought laughter from both sides of the aisle when he ridiculed the bill by proposing an amendment:

"To authorize the Commissioners to furnish sand bags for the Capitol, White House and Supreme Court, to provide tin helmets, asbestos suits and gas-masks for the members of Congress, the Chief Executive and Justices of the Supreme Court, to place air-raid watchers on the Washington Monument, to install air-raid sirens on all public buildings, except the Department of Labor, and that the subways between Senate and House Office

Mines Agree To Negotiate As Suggested By Roosevelt

Workers to Receive $1 Rise Immediately; Talks Will Follow On Pay Differential

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Immediate termination of the defense-crippling soft coal strike was announced by the White House last night after Southern mine operators had agreed to President Roosevelt's proposal of a week ago for resumption of work.

They agreed to grant a wage increase of $1 a day immediately, negotiate with the union on the latter's demand for an additional 40 cents a day, and make any agreement reached retroactive to the date of resumption.

Return of the 400,000 men to the mines tomorrow was forecast.

Stephen T. Early, Presidential secretary, after summoning reporters to his office, issued a statement saying:

"The President shortly after 11 o'clock tonight received a telegram signed 'L. Ebersole Gaines, chairman, Southern Coal Operators Wage Conference,' advising him that 'the 13 Southern districts which have not yet negotiated a wage agreement accept your proposal without equivocation,' adding 'we are ready to resume work immediately.'"

President Roosevelt immediately wired Gaines:

"I am very happy to receive your telegram of acceptance and copy of the letter to Secretary Jones that you will pay $1 additional. I sincerely hope in the interests of an immediate continuation of national defense production that the mines can be opened at the earliest practicable hour."

President's Formula

The President April 21 had suggested this formula for reopening the mines:

"1. The miners and operators already in agreement resume coal production under the terms of that agreement.

"2. The operators and miners who have not yet reached an agreement, enter into wage negotiations and at the same time reopen the mines, the agreement ultimately reached to be made retroactive to the date of resuming work."

The Northern operators already had agreed with the United Mine Workers, headed by John L. Lewis, for a $7 daily wage to replace the $6 wage in the Northern field and $5.60 in the Southern field provided in the contract which expired March 31. Southern operators had refused to agree to elimination of the 40-cent daily differential, and steadfastly refused to reopen their mines with the understanding that any agreement reached in subsequent negotiations should be retroactive to the date of reopening, as suggested by President Roosevelt.

Lewis Makes Offer

Last night's change in position followed an hours-long conference the Southerners held with Jesse Jones, Secretary of Commerce. Jones transmitted to Mr. Roosevelt a letter of the operators to him announcing that "our conference has by resolution agreed to give a wage increase of $1 per day on the basic rate and make a relative increase for all piece work."

William H. Davis, vice chairman of the Defense Mediation Board and chairman of the panel which for three days had sought to effect a settlement of the strike, told the President he understood the South-

Big British Fleet Arrives At Gibraltar

By International News Service

Vichy, April 28.—A powerful British naval force composed of mighty battle-cruisers, battleships, at least 1 aircraft carrier, 7 destroyers and 5 torpedo boats arrived at the great Western Mediterranean fortress of Gibraltar tonight, according to a dispatch from Algeciras, Spain, just across the bay from the "rock."

Planes from the aircraft carrier were reported to have taken to the air almost immediately after their arrival, ostensibly in conjunction with practice "blackout" exercises which plunged the entire Gibraltar area into darkness, the dispatch stated.

Accompanying the British fleet into the Gibraltar naval base from the Atlantic were three British merchant vessels, possibly supply ships.

Coming hard on the heels of the persistent rumors that the Axis plans a thrust southward through Spain in conjunction with the drive toward the Suez Canal and Alexandria naval base now in full fury at the eastern end of the Mediterranean, this report caused widespread speculation in Vichy political and diplomatic circles.

These circles, considering the evident need for Britain's full naval strength against German U-boats in the crucial battle of the Atlantic, considered their reported arrival at Gibraltar as tacit British confirmation that the great fortress is threatened.

But Stuka dive-bombers relentlessly attacked Allied lines retiring over the rugged terrain in the Peloponnesus and ships plying in the area between the mainland and the Island of Crete.

Occupation of the Athens area was accomplished by noon after the first German motorcycle units rolled into the city at 9:25 a. m. Sunday, news dispatches said.

The demeanor of Athenians was described as "reserved."

The British had mined the Athens airport and offered other last-minute resistance.

German parachutists dropped on the Isthmus of Corinth, the narrow land bridge leading from the Athens region westward to the Peloponnesus, and captured 900 British soldiers, a military spokesman said.

German land forces were reported pursuing the British toward the sea, but all this was described as mere "police action," and German attention was centered increasingly on future developments in the Mediterranean.

Naval Forces Secret

A fresh revelation is that German naval forces have entered into action in the Eastern Mediterranean.

A fresh revelation is that German vessels recently slipped through the straits from the Black Sea to the Mediterranean without submitting to usual transit regulations. This caused some to believe these ships possibly carried troops and war materials concealed below decks.)

Four British planes attempting to bomb German transports off the Dutch coast were shot down, the German news agency D. N. B. reported tonight, and a fifth British plane was declared downed during an attack on a German minesweeper off the Channel coast.

Three other British Spitfires were reported shot down during morning attacks on the Dutch coast.

Colonial Ministry Planned

An authorized spokesman also revealed that preparations were being made for creating a German colonial ministry.

"Germany long and consistently has claimed the right to colonies," he said in recalling persistent German prewar demands on Britain for the return of her African territories lost in the World War.

In North Africa, the high command said, British attempts to break out of besieged Tobruk again had been thwarted. Axis planes raiding British positions at Matruh, Egypt, were said to have silenced two batteries with direct hits.

At Malta a 4-motored British Sunderland flying boat was reported destroyed by German airmen.

On the Western Front German bombers "inflicted new and heavy destruction" on the British South Coast naval base of Portsmouth in the night, Germans said, and other English harbor cities in Cornwall were pounded.

A British attack on a factory in Western Germany caused a number of German casualties and slight damage but did not hamper production, the Germans said.

From April 23 to 27, the high command said, the British have lost 100 planes compared with the loss of only nine German craft.

The attack was described as part of the harassing operations the British are waging on the long Axis communication lines from Tripoli, 800 miles west of the frontier.

Heavy damage also was claimed on a motor transport convoy carrying troops near Alomata, Ethiopia, A gasoline pump was fired, the R. A. F. communique said.

Residents of Athens Told to Fly Swastika With Own Flag; Barriers Placed in Airfield

Nazi Writer Describes 'Disconsolate but Tranquil Picture'

By the Associated Press

Berlin, April 28.—The Greek flag is flying side by side with the swastika over the Acropolis at Athens, a German correspondent who flew over the ancient ruins reported today.

"An elegant expression that we honor Greece," he commented.

"Far below in the streets," his account went on, "we sighted the first conveyancesmotorized infantry.

"For some minutes were circled over the occupied city. We flew to the Athenian harbor of Piraeus and from a distance already could see a great transport lying still.

"I could detect five freighters of some 3,000 tons each, a big tub of about 7,000 tons nearby —all burned out, torn up and cracked.

"Woe to the poor Tommies who were on board in that bomb hail.

"It was a disconsolate but tranquil picture.

"Flying back over the city, we got a wonderful view of the stadium with unique beauty of colors.

"We decided to land. About 9 miles from the city is a big airport, Tatoi.

"At the last moment the English had covered the airport with all kinds of stuff to prevent German machines from landing. A few machines were on the airport and wreckage was scattered everywhere.

"Barriers had been thrown up, ditches dug, small walls built.

"We buckled ourselves down, braced our feet, gritted our teeth and made a lucky landing.

"I rode into town with Greek soldiers. At the roadside people nodded or raised their hands in greeting, apparently not considering us enemies. It is hard to understand.

Budapest, April 28 (U.P.).—The Athens radio tonight called upon all residents of the German-occupied Greek capital to surrender all arms immediately and to hoist the German flag wherever the Greek flag is flown.

Moving swiftly to bring the city under German military control, the radio urged Greek public employes to remain at their jobs.

Canadians Won't Relax Curbs On Exchange, Says Minister

By P. J. Philip.

Copyright by New York Times

Ottawa, Ont., April 28.—Canada will still puchase much moe than the United States than she sells and there is, therefore, little prospect of relaxing any of the existing foreign exchange conservation restrictions, Prime Minister MacKenzie King told the House of Commons this afternoon. He was reporting on the "Hyde Park declaration" issued by President Roosevelt and himself after their meeting on April 20.

Many of the articiles which Canada will provide to the United States in the $300,000,000 deal were of vital importance, but what was far more important than the exchange value of the deal, the prime minister claimed, was "a joint ageement between Canada and the United States for aid to Britain."

Another phase which Mackenzie King used in describing it was that "it constitutes an acceptance of the economic interdependence of Canada and the United States as the foundation of the program of war poduction in both counties. It involves nothing less than a common plan of the economic defense of the Western Hemisphere.

May Export Corvettes

The Prime Minister added no further information as to what exactly Canada will supply to the United States or what the United States will be able to furnish to Canada, saying only that the speeding up of Canadian production would permit, in time, the export of certain types of small arms, guns, ammunition, explosives, chemicals, aluminum and certain other metals, and possibly corvettes and minesweepers.

From the United States Canada will buy not only for her own use but will receive under the Lease-Lend Act United States components in equipment and munitions being produced in Canada for Britain. These articles had hitherto been paid for on British account in United States dollars and this application of the Lease-Lend Act would, the prime minister said, contribute to preventing a further increase in the deficit of Canada's trade balance with the United States.

He praised the "understanding" shown by President Roosevelt and Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau of Canada's difficult exchange position and of the value of the agreement in increasing the effectiveness of Canada's direct war effort and the volume of aid to Britain which Canada and the United States would be able to give.

Gloomy News of War

The prime minister's statement showing the satisfactory nature of this agreement followed an account of the war situation which was of almost unrelieved gloom. "We must be prepared for an extension of the fighting over wider areas and for an intensity and ferocity of warfare resulting in terrific destruction and loss of life," he said, and then he sketched the prospects in the Near East in a manner which suggested the possibility of the closing of the Mediterranean altogether, the control by Germany of the oil fields of Iraq and Iran, German occupation of North Africa with an attack on Gibraltar and simultaneous attack on Singapore.

Answering statements by R. B. Hanson, opposition leader, regarding Canada's man power contribution to the war, Defense Minister J. L. Ralston revealed that Canada has now 70,000 men overseas and 118,000 enlisted for overseas service besides her home defense militia. He declared the situation satisfactory and revealed that last October and November recruiting for overseas service was slowed down because "there were no ships to take men overseas."

their bombs were seen to strike home," said a communique.

It was acknowledged that four of the attacking planes failed to return, but one of the destroyers was declared left spouting smoke and standing still.

In other widespread daylight operations two ships of 2,000 and 1,500 tons were reported hit and sunk off the Dutch and French coasts. A 1,250-ton German patrol ship off the coast of Brittany also was bombed amidships, the blast putting an end to her resistance.

Explosives were planted in a factory and railroad yards at Meppel, Dutch town near the Zuider Zee, and the airdromes at De Kooy in Holland were attacked for the second successive day.

The docks at Den Heler naval base and at Fjmuiden also were reported bombed, and a German supply train in the Netherlands raked.

The Germans, after making the naval center of Portsmouth their chief target Sunday night, returned today to bomb and machine-gun a town, several villages and a train in Scotland, and the English east coast.

A German Heinkel was shot down off the east coast by a boat and one of its crew committed suicide. The other three of the crew were captured. Antiaircraft winged another raider off the southeast coast.

At Portsmouth working class residences in several streets were severely battered, many persons were buried in wreckage, a large hotel was demolished, a hospital was dismantled by three direct hits and another hospital damaged. Several persons were killed in an air raid shelter.

Australia Expects Heavy Equipment Loss in Greece

By the Associated Press

Sydney, Australia, April 28.—The withdrawal of certain Australian troops from Greece has been successful so far, Army Minister Percy C. Speder said today, but he indicated considerable losses in heavy material were expected.

Spender said Lieut. Gen. Sir Thomas Blamey, commanding the Australians there, had been ordered to remove men ahead of tanks and other equipment.

Following a meeting of the war cabinet, Acting Prime Minister A. W. Fadden declared a "most real" unity with Britain in war effort and said that efforts had been made to send from Australia an incorrect view of her war mood.

Firm steps are being taken to suppress ill-considered, ill-timed and ill-informed statements, he added.

Vichy Threatens War in Africa

these French African possessions which are now used as communication routes or as bases for British military operations.

At least five French army divisions, from Gen. Maxime Weygand's forces in North Africa, would be required to recapture the lost colonies and regions which include Gabon, the Chad Territory, the mandated Cameroons, the Ubangi-Shari Territory and the Middle Congo comprising all of French Equatorial Africa.

The De Gaulle forces also hold Dahomey and Togoland, while French West Africa and French Guinea and the ivory coast still are loyal to the Vichy government.

The British-Free French attack on French Somaliland is for the purpose of clearing the Djibouti-Addis Ababa Railroad for the British armies conquering Ethiopia.

Leading the attack is Gen. Gentilhomme, former French military governor of Djibouti and onetime commander of all the French forces in East Africa. Under Gentilhomme, it was reported, is a force of less than 20,000 troops.

A Free French plane flew deep into Somaliland today dropping pamphlets on towns, troop concentrations and railroad stations, urging the French to desert to the De Gaulle forces.

The French government said tonight that explicit instructions had been sent to Colonial Governor Nouailhetas at Djibouti, ordering him to resist and enter into no relations of any kind with the French dissidents.

Arms Fraud Made Capital Crime in Italy

By the Associated Press

Rome, April 28.—The Fascist government tonight decreed death, life imprisonment and lesser prison terms for certain cases of failure by contractors, workers and soldiers to fulfill obligations to the state.

The decree issued by Premier Mussolini, ordered death for aggravated cases of fraud affecting military operations, prison sentences ranging up to life for contractors who fall down on military supply jobs, long prison terms for soldiers who fail to show up at departure of their troop units, and death by shooting in the breast for soldiers guilty of aggravated second offenses.

The government already has banned all strikes.

This tightening up of Italy's war effort came as the high command reported the occupation of the Greek island of Corfu in the Adriatic and occupation of the Greek naval base of Preveza.

In addition, the sinking by submarine of a 10,000-ton "enemy" auxiliary cruiser in the Atlantic was announced.

But the withdrawal from Dessie of the Duke D'Aosta's forces, making their last stand in scattered strongholds in Ethiopia, was admitted. Dessie is about 175 miles northeast of Addis Ababa.

The high command said resistance was continuing in the Alagi area, 135 miles northeast of Dessie and 40 miles south of Makale.

Mussolini decreed 5 to 15 years in prison for "anyone who failing to carry out obligations resulting from contract or monopoly causes a shortage, wholly or in part, of things or works meant to meet the needs of the armed forces."

A mere delay in production of military needs would bring a sentence of three to ten years.

In the case of fraud in the furnishing of military supplies the minimum penalty is 15 years while a maximum penalty of life imprisonment can be applied if serious harm results to the welfare of the troops.

War tribunals were given jurisdiction to [illegible] the industrial and fraud cases.

The high command said Preveza, much bombed in the war with the Greeks, was occupied by an armored car battalion which moved down along the Ionian coast.

Nazis Give City On English Coast A Heavy Pounding

A Southwest Coast Town in England (Thursday), April 29 (AP).—A German air attack described by some observers as one of the heaviest ever in this area blasted this town for several hours early today.

A few bombs also were dropped on East Anglia, while London sirens remained quiet. Two bombers were reported shot down.

Other bombers were reported over another southwest coast town and over the south coast.

23 Convicted Of Conspiracy

Detroit, April 28 (AP).—A Circuit Court jury that for three months heard testimony of a huge graft conspiracy to protect vice and gambling in Wayne County convicted late today former Prosecutor Duncan C. McCrea, former Sheriff Thomas C. Wilcox and 21 others.

The verdict, in the first big trial resulting from Circuit Judge Homer Ferguson's one-man grand jury inveestigation of official corruption in the Detroit area, supported the State's charges against all but one defendant.

More Escaped Greece Than London Hoped

By Robert P. Post

Copyright by New York Times

London, April 28.—Australian sources backed up the Germans in announcing the evacuation of Greece by the imperial forces though the British are still keeping their utter silence on the subject and are likely to keep it until the operation is complete.

There is the censorship question here and the matter cannot be discussed to any length at the moment, at least. But it would appear from all reports that many more troops have been evacuated safely from Greece than anybody had the right to expect. Undoubtedly when the full story is told it will be one of a most gallant kind of rearguard action.

A general opinion here is that the next German move will be in some way directed against the Suez Canal.

Alexandria In Range

The most obvious method for such an attack would be by the German columns which have already crossed the border between Egypt and Libya in small quantities. If the Germans can continue this drive eastward, of course, that is one way in which they can take Egypt and the Suez, but there is much doubt as to whether they can.

It is probable that while the British fleet has been busy further eastward, the Germans may have sent many supplies across from Italy. But there is no reason to believe that they will be able to keep them going across, once the British fleet is free to interrupt them.

On the other hand, the Germans have airplanes to help them. Alexandria is not out of bombing distance from either Greece or Salum, Egypt, which the Axis now holds.

If German bombers can make Alexandria untenable for the British fleet, it will be a serious blow because without a solid base in the eastern Mediterranean, the British navy cannot function against the Germans.

Believe Turkey Is Next

But apart from the threat from Cyrenaica there are other possibilities now open to the Germans. One is Turkey and that is the one most people here expect to be next. It is quite possible—even probable—that the Germans will turn east from Greece to attack Turkey, seize the Dardanelles, then press along against Iraq and Iran, seize the important oilfields and carry out in the modern way Kaiser Wilhelm's old dream.

An alternative way of doing the same thing and not an impossible way would be through Syria. The Germans are already filtrating in this wavering French colony. They are also filtrating into Iraq in numbers which are far more serious. That is one reason why British troops were landed at Basra.

In other words there is the possibility that the Germans might try to by-pass Turkey though this does not seem possible in view of the difficulties of passing mechanized troops across the Aegean Sea and the Eastern Mediterranean, and start their drive from the east on Suez from Syria, including at the same time an attack on Iraq and Iran, which would give them—if successful—important oil.

Railroads to Cut aRte for Servicemen

The Interstate Commerce Commission authorized railroads yesterday to carry members of the Nation's armed forces at a rate of 1¼ cents a mile, instead of the regular two-cent rate.

Beginning May 1, servicemen may take advantage of the rate by identifying themselves and showing they are on leave.

Court Upholds NLRB Order For Back Pay

Congress had not given the board "any authority to reinstate those who have 'obtained any other regular and substantially equivalent employment.'"

"Unprecedented Exercise"

Stone and Hughes further denied Congress "has also authorized it to order the employer to hire applicants for work who have never been in his employ or to compel him to give them 'back pay' for any period whatever.

Agreeing that refusal to hire the two applicants was an unfair labor practice, the Stone-Hughes dissent said the board was authorized to order the Phelps Dodge Corporation "to cease and desist from the practice" and to take appropriate proceedings to enforce its order.

"But an authority to order reinstatement is not an authority to compel the employer to instate as his employes those whom he has never employed, and an authority to award 'back pay' to reinstate employes, is not an authority to compel payment of wages to applicants for employment whom the employer was never bound to hire," they said. "Authority for so unprecedented an exercise of power is not lightly to be inferred."

Justice Murphy, joined by Justices Black and Douglas, in a separate concurring opinion, said the board's order to require reinstatement of employes whether or not they have found other employment, and its power to make back pay awards should have been flatly upheld. They denied any need to remand the matter to the board for a determination of whether it was necessary to carry out the act.

"The board followed the precise procedure which this court said it should have adopted," the Murphy opinion said. "It found that the employes in question had been the victims of unfair labor practices. It also found that the policies of the act would be effectuated by ordering their reinstatement. Since there was evidence to support these findings, it is difficult to understand what more the board should or could have done."

Source of the controversy stemmed from a strike begun June 10, 1935, by the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers at Phelps Dodge's Copper Queen mine. The board had ordered Philps Dodge to reinstate 37 of the strikers with back pay and to compensate another striker for wages he had lost when he became unemployable. Two men, William Daugherty and Vernon D. Curtis, once had worked for the company but were not employed there when the strike was called. They sought employment after the strike and were refused. The board ordered the company to offer Daugherty and Curtis jobs and to give them loss of pay, alleging the union background of the men was responsible for the refusal to hire them.

"Old and Familiar"

Frankfurter in his majority ruling said denial of jobs to men because of union affiliations is "an old and familiar aspect of American industrial relations."

"It is no longer disputed that workers cannot be dismissed because of their union affiliations. Is the national interest in industrial peace less affected by discrimination against union activity when men are hired?"

The opinion called discrimination against union labor in the hiring of men "a dam to self-organization at the source of supply."

Having found the company in violation of the act for denying employment because of union affiliation, Frankfurter said, it was clearly within the power of the board to "neutralize the discrimination" with orders for reinstatement and back pay.

The fact that the victim of discrimination had obtained equivalent employment, he said, did not preclude the board from ordering reinstatement at Phelps Dodge.

In another opinion, the court upheld 5 to 3 a Labor Board order denying on individual plant of a company the right to select its own collective bargaining representation and compelling it to make a joint selection with five other widely separated plants.

Justice Reed delivered the opinion, applying to all six plants of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co., located in five States. Chief Justice Hughes and Justices Roberts and Stone dissented. Justice Reed in his opinion said the labor act "places upon the board the responsibility of determining the appropriate group of employes for the bargaining unit."

Parents Go to School to Study Psychology

Certain of getting certificates, and hopeful of rearing better children, 35 parents of Kingsman School pupils have returned to school to learn psychology.

They learned yesterday that the mouth sympolizes the infant's world; that his ego is as big as his world; but that as years pass his world enlarges and his ego diminishes, all having something to do along the way with raids on cookie jars.

They handed up questions to Dr. Jesse W. Sprowls, psychology professor at Maryland University, the lecturer, and in general were reassured.

"My son's teacher says he is the poorest speller in the class," a parent said. "Since she told me, I make him study spelling every night, reviewing all the words he has had during the semester. But unless I test him every night he forgets how to spell them!

"Is he hopeless?" she concluded.

Dr. prowls stroked his chin.

"Seek out the thing he is interested in and direct the school studies around that interest," he said at last.

Again:

"Why is it that a boy of 8 does not read and doesn't even want to learn how?"

"Study his interests," said the doctor. "There's nothing abnormal about it. Have his eyes examined."

Another parent jotted down, "My girl is 9 and has been fatherless since she was 2. How will this unnatural home affect her as she gets older? She often talks about other children speaking of their fathers."

All children, he replied, "take an interest in their parents. There is nothing abnormal about this girl."

Dr. Sprowls dwelt yesterday on what education can and can't do for people and lumped its benefits in Teddy Roosevelt's conclusion that it's something which keeps a person from making a —— fool of himself."

The class meets each Monday from 1:30 to 2:30 p. m. The school is located at Fourteenth and E Streets Northeast.

High Court Rules for Negroes in Train Case

The Supreme Court held yesterday that Negroes traveling from one State to another are entitled to railroad accommodations equal to those furnished white persons.

Chief Justice Hughes delivered the decision on a test case brought by Representative Arthur W. Mitchell (Democrat), of Illinois, the only colored member of Congress. No dissent was announced.

Mitchell contended that he had been "forcibly ejected" from a Pullman in Arkansas, while traveling from Chicago to Hot Springs in 1937, and had been compelled to complete the journey "in a Jim Crow car with second-class accommodations."

Invasion of Rights

"This," Hughes asserted, "was manifestly a discrimination against him in the course of his interstate journey and admittedly that discrimination was based solely upon the fact that he was a Negro.

"The question whether this was a discrimination forbidden by the Interstate Commerce Act is not a question of segregation but one of equality of treatment. The denial to appellant (Mitchell) of equality of accommodations because of his race would be an invasion of a fundamental individual right which is guaranteed against State action by the fourteenth amendment, and in view of the nature of the right and of our constitutional policy it cannot be maintained that the discrimination as it was alleged was not essentially unjust."

The Chief Justice said that because segregation was not involved the court had no occasion to consider the questions discussed by the attorneys general of ten States in a brief filed with the Supreme Court.

Dismissed by ICC

Mitchell's petition for equal rights was dismissed by the Interstate Commerce Commission and by the Northern Illinois Federal District Court.

The Justice Department sided with Mitchell and against the ICC counsel for the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway Co., on whose train Mitchell rode, said the practice was to place Negroes having Pullman tickets in a compartment and charging them only seat fare. The compartments had been sold out on this particular day, it was explained.

Among other actions yesterday, the court:

Overruled a 12-year-old decision to hold constitutional a Nebraska law limiting the compensation permitted private employment agencies.

Ruled in another decision by Hughes that the jurisdiction of Florida extended on its western boundary for 9 nautical miles into the Gulf of Mexico, despite the traditional 3-mile limit for national control. The boundary was fixed by a State constitution of 1868.

Agreed to reconsider five of its recent 4-to-4 decisions and granted rehearings October 13. The evenly divided rulings were made possible by the retirement of Justice James C. McReynolds, whose seat has not been filled by President Roosevelt.

Upheld an Interstate Commerce Commission order permitting the Hudson & Manhattan Railroad Co. to increase from 6 to 8 cents the fare charged passengers between Hudson Terminal in New York City and Jersey City and Hoboken.

Held constitutional as applied to transportation in interstate commerce, California legislation requiring a license and bond for an automobile transporation agent.

Four-to-Four Decisions

The four-to-four decisions, which affirmed rulings by lower courts, and in which rehearings were granted, held that:

1. A company which obtained coal from mines it leased, but which were operated by others under contract, is exempt from price-fixing provisions of the Federal Bituminous Coal Act. The ruling specifically involved the Seaboard Air Line Railway.

2. The New York, Chicago & St. Louis Railroad Co. is responsible for interest on bonds which had been guaranteed by a constituent company, the Lake Erie & Western Railroad, when the two merged in 1923.

3 An injured employe of a railroad may bring suit in the most remote Federal district court in whose jurisdiction the carrier operates. The dispute involved a suit brought by Frederick S. Kepner, of Ohio, against the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Co.

4. The Federal Circuit Court at New York was correct in dismissing a suit by the Commercial Molasses Corporation of Weehawken for damages against the New York Tank Barge Corporation growing out of the sinking of a barge at Hoboken, N. J., October 24, 1937.

5. The Eighth Federal Circuit Court was correct in enjoining Samuel R. Toucey, of Kansas City, Mo., from continuing litigation seeking to recover from the New York Life Insurance Co. on a $50,000 policy.

Review Is Denied In D. C. Laundry Case

The Supreme Court refused yesterday to review a Labor Board order directing the Arcade-Sunshine Co., Inc., of Washington, to offer reinstatement with back pay to an employe found by the board to have been dismissed for labor union activities. The laundry company contended the dismissal was for drunkenness.

Challenging a decision by the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia, which upheld the Labor Board action, the company told the court:

"Has the board the power to order an employer to reinstate an employe who was discharged while drunk on the job and unable to perform his work? We think the question is vital to national defense."

The Labor Board said a foreman had testified that the dismissed man, William Jones, was drunk practically every day of the 11 years that he worked for the laundry, and that his usual output was about 10 or 12 per cent of a fair day's work.

"President Viner testified," the board addded, 'that he had instructed the foreman to discharge Jones on 'about 100 or 200' occasions, and at times as often as 'three times a day.'

"The board concluded that this testimony was fabricated to conceal the real reason for Jones' discharge."

The board added that Jones, shortly prior to his discharge, had "demonstrated his loyalty" to the Laundry Workers, Cleaners and Dyers Union by refusing to sign a petition pledging loyalty to the company.

The board's order also directed the company to post notices saying that it would not interfere with its employes' right to bargain collectively.

Strikes a Real Peril, N. A. M. Head Asserts

erners' offer was acceptable to Lewis, while Charles F. O'Neill, chairman of the Northern operators, said "that will mean we can all go back to work."

These dramatic developments followed a tense day of Capitol Hill hearings on the fuel tie-up and the mounting effect it was having in curtailing defense production.

Lewis had told the Senate Defense Investigating Committee, headed by Senator Truman, of Missouri, that he would end the strike in the Northern mines within 48 hours if the Federal Government would guarantee to feed the Southern miners and protect them from what he described as "hired gunmen" of the Southern operators.

Senator Truman, who, after yesterday's hearing, said the committee was working on a formula of its own for ending the tie-up, said last night that in view of the settlement the committee would not hold the meeting scheduled for today.

Edward F. McGrady, special labor consultant to the War Department and former Assistant Secretary of Labor, told the commitee that the time point has passed when settlement of the coal strike could have averted damage to the defense program. The question now, he said is to limit the damage before "the entire industrial preparedness drive is completely paralyzed."

Lewis told the committee session, overflowing with spectators, that the U. M. W. was "afraid" to agree to a suggestion that the union end the strike in northern mines and continue negotiations or arbitrate the disagreement in the South.

"Whenever the Government can give public guarantees that they will protect our people in the South—give them food, assure civil liberties and provide medical service during the strike—we'll go back to work in the North," he stated.

Amid popping flash-bulbs and clicking news-reel cameras, the shaggy-maned former C. I. O. chieftain charged that already company stores in Southern coal fields have been closed, and that continuance of the strike would mean shutting off power and water and "oppression by hired gunmen."

At the morning session, the committee heard representatives of the Northern and Southern mine operators present their side of the complex dispute, as well as Government and union witnesses.

Lewis, pounding the table and clashing several times with Senators, opposed a proposal put forward by the Southern operators that the dispute be referred to arbitration. He said that the union already had reached an agreement with 70 per cent of the industry and that arbitration with the 30 per cent in the South "would vitiate this agreement."

L. T. Putman, representing the Southern operators, declared the latter could not agree to the proposal of President Roosevelt and the Mediation Board that they accept the agreement reached between the Northern operators and the union.

Blaming freight rate advantages in favor of the Northern mines, Putman declared:

"The Southern mines simply couldn't operate under the new proposal."

Under questioning by Chairman Truman, Putman said that he considered the present soft coal dispute "largely an argument between operators" rather than a capital-labor dispute.

Charles O'Neill, representing the Northern mine operators, told the committee the Northern group had reached an agreement with the United Mine Workers and have been "ready to go back to work since April 21."

Asked why work had not been resumed, O'Neill said that the southern operators had "walked out" on wage negotiations and had refused to accept proposals by President Roosevelt and the mediation board to end the shutdown.

U.A.W. Alters Ford Complaint

By the Associated Press

New York, April 28.—The United Automobile Workers (C. I. O.) moved today to amend its complaint against the Ford Motor Co. to include charges that three additional employes were discharged at its Edgewater, N. J., assembly plant for union activities.

The union had contended at a National Labor Relations Board hearing that 26 employes at the plant were dismissed because of union activities, but asked that the number be increased to 29 after testimony was given today concerning three other dismissals. William B. Barton, trial examiner, took the motion under advisement.

Elliott Lee Murray, of Navasota, Tex., formerly assistant superintendent at the plant, testified that shortly before his own dismissal in November, 1938, he was instructed by A. M. Harris, plant superintendent, to discharge three men.

Murray said he objected and Harris told him he "intended to get rid of all of the Italians in the factory because they cause more trouble in labor than any other race."

Earlier, Murray testified he was instructed to "be a diplomat" in getting rid of employes suspected of union activities.

He said foremen were instructed, when a man was suspected of belonging to the U. A. W., to give orders to "force the man down the line." That meant, he explained, that work was to be piled upon the man in question so that he was unable to keep up on the assembly line and had to follow the car down the line to complete his operation.

"DEPARTMENTALIZED CLEANSING"

Coal Strike Ends as Mines In South Yield

Philadelphia, April 28 (AP).—Disputing statements by Government officials concerning defense industry strikes, Walter D. Fuller, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, asserted tonight that "propagandizing ourselves into believing that strikes in defense industries don't amount to much is to invite national tragedy.'

"America needs to be shocked," Fuller, who is president of the Curtis Publishing Co. told a regional N. A. M. conference. "America needs to be brought up short against the stark realism of what is going on about us. . . . playing ostrich with the unrelenting day-to-day facts of defense production is gambling with our destiny."

Declarng that "the activities of the Administration . . have been pretty much limited to efforts to belittle the effects of strikes" with assertion that "They don't amount to much'," the manufacturers' head said "It all depends on what you mean by much."

He Gives Figures

The soft coal strike "is classified by Government spokesmen as a nondefense stoppage," he declared and added "during the first three months of this year strikes in defense industries alone lost 1,577,816 man-days of production.

"Is that much or isn't it? Perhaps the mothers and fathers of draftees will answer that question for us when they learn that the time lost has been enough to equip 1,402,480 American boys with the latest Garland rifles or to provide more than 5,000,000,000 rounds of ammunition."

Although strikes are "admittedly the major bottleneck in defense production," Fuller asserted, "we find a disposition, strangely reminiscent of the entire past decade, to overlook all faults except those which . . . can be laid at the doorsteps of industry and management."

The fact is, he said, "that American industry in ten months has performed a modern miracle of defense. In that time, through the voluntary cooperation of free men, we have made more progress than Hitler did in 2½ years with his much vaunted dictated economy.

Sees "Squeeze" Play

Under present trends, manufacturers will be the victims of a "squeeze play." Efforts are being made to stabilize prices of manufactured products while wages apparently are being allowed to increase regardless. Certain raw materials prices probably will increase. These forces will reduce profits from which the Government expects to obtain a large part of the revenue needed for defense. It just doesn't make sense."

The office of price administration and civilian supply "will have to assume the same controls over labor and Government as factors in price raising and profiteering" as it does over industrial prices, Fuller asserted

Odds of Death Were Greater

Smiling and happy, she celebrated her eleventh birthday recently, but yesterday the odds proved too great

Glenn Martin Strike Ends Without Pact

Baltimore, April 28 (AP).—The Glenn L. Martin Co. announced today that "several" of the 27 men who left their jobs at the aircraft plant last week had applied for reemployment and the differences with the C. I. O. group which ordered a "general strike" had been settled.

Martin declared in a statement that "there has been no change whatever in the relationship between the company and its employes" and that "no separate agreement has been made by the company with anyone."

A small picket line which had been posted at the company's gates since Thursday was withdrawn today.

The plant employs 17,000 persons and is engaged in making planes under contracts totaling $375,000,000. Martin said that production continued on schedule through the brief walkout.

Tool Strike Put Off

Detroit, April 28 (INS).—C. I. O. strike action against the Ex-Cell-O Corporation, which makes tools and dies for national defense industries, was postponed today under an agreement proposed by Gov. Murray D. Van Wagoner's special mediation commission.

The United Auto Workers and the corporation agreed to attempt further negotiations on the U. A. W. demands for pay raises, a union shop and a revised vacation schedule. The union had threatened to go on strike today.

Mediators Ask Union to Defer Gun Stoppage

Moving into the field of strike prevention as well as strike cure, the National Defense Mediation Board yesterday requested company and union disputants of the Minneapolis Honeywell Regulator Co. to avoid a work stoppage scheduled for last midnight, pending a hearing before the board on the issues of the controversy.

The threatened strike, which concerns recognition of the C. I. O. United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, was certified to the board by the Labor Department yesterday afternoon. The company holds about $2,000,000 of artillery parts contracts and employs 2,000 men.

The board set next Monday as the hearing date. The decision of the company and union on the request for postponing the strike call was not immediately determined.

The Minneapolis Honeywell dispute was the fourth prestrike case certified to the board. Of the others, strikes were prevented in all cases, one of which is settled and the remaining two are still pending for board determination.

A board panel yesterday met with the disputants in one of the prestrike cases, involving the Kellogg Automatic Switchboard Co., Chicago, and a second panel sought to settle the strike at two New Jersey plants of the John Roebling Sons Co.

General Electric to Give Rise In Pay to 75,000 Workers

By the Associated Press

New York, April 28.—A 10-cent an hour wage increase for 75,000 to 80,000 factory workers in the major plants of the General Electric Co. was announced today in a joint statement issued by the company and the United Electrical Radio and Machine Workers of America (C. I. O.).

The agreement, which included also provisions for double time instead of time and a half for work on "observed holidays and Sundays, now goes to local unions for ratification, said the statement signed by W. R. Burrows, vice president of the company, and Julius Emspak, secretary-treasurer of the union.

A company spokesman said the plants affected were at Bridgeport, Conn.; Schnectady, N. Y.; Erie, Pa.; Pittsfield, Mass.; Lynn, Mass.; Philadelphia, and Fort Wayne, Ind.

U. S. Steel Clerks Win Boost

Pittsburgh, April 28 (AP).—More than 10,000 of the 20,000 "white collar" employes of the United States Steel Corporation have received pay increases in line with the recent 10 cents an hour wage boost for hourly rate workers, the company disclosed today.

The increase for salaried employes will affect those earning up to $4,000 yearly.

Several other steel companies which increased hourly wages announced at the time that salaries would be revised upward.

Westinghouse Increases

Pittsburgh, April 28 (AP).—An agreement providing wage increases of $18 a month for salaried union employes of the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. was announced today in a joint company and union statement.

The agreement is subject to approval by union committees in 24 Westinghouse plants. The total amount of increase involved and the number of employes affected could not be ascertained immediately.

Last week Westinghouse, which has 65,000 employes, announced a raise equivalent to 10 cents an hour for its hourly rate workers.

The Carnegie-Illinois Steel Co., U. S. Steel subsidiary, disclosed today it also has given a raise amounting to approximately 10 cents an hour to 10,000 of its 20,000 "white collar" employes.

House Unit Approves Wide Priorities Law

By the Associated Press

Sweeping "priorities" legislation, under which the Government could direct industry to give precedence to all United States defense materials and supplies for nations battling the Axis, was approved by the House Naval Committee yesterday.

Chairman Vinson (Democrat), of Georgia, sponsor of the measure to sanction and expand the existing priorities system, said he would ask the House Rules Committee tomorrow to permit speedy consideration on the House floor.

The bill would permit the Office of Production Management to apply the "urgently needed" designation to all defense materials, including those being produced by subcontractors, on the same basis as Army and Navy orders are now handled. Besides materials needed in the direct preparation of war implements, OPM could establish priorities on such things as the construction of water supply systems, industrial training programs and defense housing.

Edward R. Stettinius, jr., director of priorities, told the Naval Committee the OPM was drafting a new system to control possible "leakage" of defense materials into normal production, a program Vinson called an effort to stop any "bootlegging" of preparedness goods.

Stettinius said the OPM had been receiving "full cooperation" from industry in the voluntary priority program launched under the President's executive order creating OPM, but insisted there was a need for legislation to make the priority orders "binding and legal."

He commented that present orders directing that preference be given to the manufacture of certain materials were subject to lawsuits. The Vinson proposal specifically exempts firms with mandatory priority contracts from civil liabilities in case they have to default on nondefense orders.

The House completed Congressional action yesterday on a measure giving the Maritime Commission authority to negotiate without competitive bidding for the building of new ships and for the chartering of commission-owned vesels.

C. E. to Use Radio Facilities for Arms

New York, April 28 (AP).—Charles E. Wilson, president of General Electric Co., announced today he had informed Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox that all the company's resources normally engaged in research on radio and television receivers and electronic tubes will be turned over immediately to defense production.

The move, it was said, will have the effect of "freezing" the 1941-42 radio models, as research personnel and facilities are transferred from work on commercial equipment to the electronic services now needed by the Government for the armed forces.

been called the first line of your defense you may just as well cancel the word 'international,' and give up all hope of holding meetings abroad for many decades to come."

Stating that the remark was perhaps cynical, he said that if England gives up the fight in Europe, "You must also give up any idea of trusting us—your best customers—and stop any of your silent workers who are studying ways and means to put the world again on an even keel once this scourge has been removed from wasting their time."

MacMillan told the gathering that the outcome of the war depends on the Battle of the Atlantic which, he said, "is now at its height."

Canadians' Belief

He declared: "It is our Canadian conviction that we in North America are not defended by geography; that the Atlantic, from a defense standpoint, is not a dependable barrier, but that it is merely a delay factor.

"Therefore, the Battle of the Atlantic is the crucial battle—if it is lost our cause is lost and you are besieged and isolated, your markets gone. The first and last step in winning this battle for the democracies is the maintenance of the British bastion, in which we and our ideals are defended by a powerful, heroic race."

Thomas J. Watson, of New York, president of the American Business Machines Corporation and honorary president of the International Chamber of Commerce, said that American business will back this country to the full extent of its ability.

Trade to Be Revived

Wadsworth said in brief introductory remarks that "Whenever the war may end, the problem of reconstruction world trade will be the first need of humanity."

A proposal that "public opinion" demand the resignation of Secretary of Labor Perkins brought cheers from chamber delegates at a session held yesterday afternoon at the organization's headquarters.

Roy C. Ingersoll, president of the Ingersoll Steel and Disc Division of the Borg-Warner Corporation, Chicago, made the proposal in a discussion of busines and defense activities.

He declared: "We are wondering how long it will be until public opinion will become so aroused that it will demand the resignation of a Secretary of Labor who—"

Cheers drowned out his voice, and he resumed:

"... A Secretary of Labor who condones sit-down strikes, has prevented the deportation of Alien Harry Bridges who through his activities costs hundred of millions of dollars to our shipping and West Coast business, who has refuse to assign to the National Mediation Board at time when such actions might have saved millions of man-hours and when each hour means so much to our defense program."

Ingersoll praised Senator Byrd, of Virginia, "who fearlessly expresses himself on the subject of incompetency of the director of the Department of Labor."

He added, "we are hoping that there will be enough of this type of statesmanship in Congress that will force an amendment to the National Labor Relations Act along the lines proposed by the Smith Committee."

Such legislation he termed "the greatest boon to employe and employer alike as it would help to overlook the many defects of the National Labor Relations Act which has proved to be a wolf in sheep's clothing because it has accomplished the opposite of the preamble to the act in bringing employes and employers together and preventing strikes."

Warns Against Derangement

At the opening morning session President James S. Kemper warned the 1,500 representatives of local chambers and affiliated trade associations from all sections of the country against "an hysterical derangement of our normal production" in the effort to speed industries essential to national defense.

In his keynote address Kemper:

Called for an increase in taxes

plus governmental economizing on nonmilitary items to help defray the costs of the heavy armaments bill.

Opposed legislation prohibiting defense strikes, because in this eld legislative compulsion never yet has worked satisfactorily."

Advised business men to start planning at once for postemergency readjustments and markets.

Declared that now as never before "this Republic of free men" must be guarded against "eventual supremacy of the state."

Terming strikes the most serious obstacle to our own military defense," Kemper named antistrike legislation as the worst possible way to deal with the problem." He recommended continued use of the method of voluntary mediation" undertaken by the Defense Mediation Board.

Buildings and Capitol be comfortably furnished as air-raid shelters for members of Congress only."

Fish joined Representatives Jessie Sumner (Republican), of Illinois, and Stephen Young (Democrat), of Ohio, in attacking the bill as a measure calculated to spread war hysteria throughout the Nation.

Randolph gave the House a picture of "squadrons of bombers" bringing "devastation, destruction and death," with the National Capital as "the initial target of attack."

He complained hat the Nation is "treating the problem of preparedness with too much complacency." He pointed out that there are no air raid shelters in the District, few anti-aircraft guns and "not many" military airplanes.

Canada Seizes Coffee Shipment

Vancouver, B. C., April 28 (U.P.).—The Canadian government has seized a shipment of 1,500,000 pounds of coffee allegedly destined for Germany aboard a freighter berthed here, it was disclosed today. The shipment comprised 11,000 bags of coffee and originated in Cristobal, Panama.

It was to have been transshipped at San Francisco for Germany via Japan and Russia, according to reliable information, but the freighter was given radioed instructions at sea to proceed to Vancouver instead of San Francisco.

The ship's registry, date of seizure and origin of the wirelessed instructions to the freighter were not disclosed.

excess profits tax on corporations and proposed stringent non-defense economies.

The excise tax proposals that caught Morgenthau's fire were outlined in a report to the committee by Congressional staff experts on taxes, who recommended modification of the Treasury's steep surtax proposals, and a shift of part of the burden to excises and excess profits taxation.

Morgenthau said the time might come when coffee, tea and sugar will have to be taxed, but "it certainly is not necessary this year."

"I don't see how they could have picked any worse things to tax," said the Secretary, adding that they went "against everything this Administration has stood for."

He said he was 99 per cent sure he was voicing the view of the Administration.

Gasoline Levy Opposed

As tax hearings opened to the general public, John V. Lawrence, representing the American Tracking Associations, led off before the Ways and Means Committee with testimony against the Treasury's proposed 1-cent increase in the Federal gasoline tax. Lawrence said the gasoline tax increase to 2½ cents might "defeat its own purpose" by curtailing use of motor vehicles.

A fourth witness, Thomas M. Bullock, of the State-Planters Bank & Trust Co., of Richmond, Va., recommended that amortization of bond premiums on investment portfolios be made allowable deductions to taxpayers whether the holders of such securities be banks, corporations or individuals.

In asking further broadening of the tax base, Seidman, of the New York Board of Trade, said he thought "it must be obvious that we shall have to dig down into the smaller incomes ever so much more deeply than we have heretofore attempted."

If Congress increases rates alone, as has been proposed, without lowering exemptions, he said it would "continue to permit three-quarters of our national income to escape the tax."

The New York Board of Trade witness said lowering exemptions was "a bitter pill to swallow politically," and the line of last resistance was to substitute additional hidden excise taxes.

Coupled with lowering of exemptions, Seidman said he favored an increase in rates all along the line, "providing we are scrupulously fair in determining taxable net income, and providing also that we ease up on the tax duplication which now results from heavily taxing income to a corporation and then again taxing it at full rates when what is left of it is distributed to the stockholder."

Schieffelin told the committee the New York State Chamber of Commerce "fully indorses" the Treasury proposal to raise $3,500,000,000 of new revenue. But he said he did not believe the plan outlined by the Treasury would accomplish Morgenthau's other stated objectives of sharing the burden among all sections of people, reducing the amount of money the public spends on relatively unimportant things while mobilizing resources for defense, and preventing a general price rise.

Meanwhile, Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia in a radio address said the Administration is "taking a realistic view of our financial condition" in its $3,500,000,000 tax program. He said it was the first time it had done so since it started its policy of "deficit spending and pump priming to promote business."

Byrd said it would have been much better if there had been greater taxation during years of deficit spending and "better still" if spending had not been so great.

Lindbergh Quits Army Air Corps

serving my country as an Air Corps officer in the event of war."

Then the flier went on to say that he severed his relationship with the Air Corps with "the utmost regret" because it was "one of the things that has meant most to me in life."

But, he continued, his Army relationship was "second only to my right as a citizen to speak freely to my fellow countrymen and to discuss with them the issues of peace and war which confront our Nation in this crisis."

Commissioned in 1925

Lindbergh in recent months has been a leading isolationist speaker. Last Wednesday night he said at a New York rally that Britain had only one "last desperate plan remaining"—to persuade American entry into the war and to have this country share the "fiasco" with England both militarily and financially.

The flier was commissioned as a second lieutenant in 1925 after two years as cadet flier at the Army's Kelly Field. He soon was promoted to a captaincy. As a colonel in the Reserve, he had several active tours of duty.

Neither President Roosevelt nor the War Department had any early comment on the Lindbergh resignation.

Army officials, however, did say that it was the War Department's general policy not to accept resignations from reserve officers during the emergency period. It was pointed out, however, that no regulations covered the point and the question of acceptance or rejection of the flier's resignation was entirely optional with the Secretary of War.

Text of Letter

The text of Col. Lindbergh's letter follows:

"My Dear Mr. President:

"Your remarks at White House press conference on April 25 involving my reserve commission in the United States Army Air Corps, have of course disturbed me greatly. I had hoped that I might exercise my right as an American citizen, to place my viewpoint before the people of my country in time of peace without giving up the privilege of serving my country as an Air Corps officer in the event of war.

"But since you, in your capacity as President of the United States and Commander in Chief of the Army, have clearly implied that I am no longer of use to this country as a reserve officer, and in view of other implications that you, my President and my superior officer, have made concerning my loyalty to my country, my character, and my motives, I can see no honorable alternative to tendering my resignation as colonel in the United States Army Air Corps Reserve. I am, therefore, forwarding my resignation to the Secretary of War.

"I take this action with the utmost regret, for my relationship with the Air Corps is one of the things that has meant most to me in life. I place it second only to my right as a citizen to speak freely to my fellow countrymen, and to discuss with them the issues of war and peace which confront our Nation in this crisis.

"I will continue to serve my country to the best of my ability as a private citizen.

"Respectfully,

Charles A. Lindbergh."

Army Rejects One in Nine D. C. Whites

Rejections of white District registrants at Richmond and Baltimore induction centers are running consistently at about two-thirds of the national rejection percentage and at one-fourth of the percentage of local colored rejections at induction stations, Washington Selective Service officials disclosed yesterday.

Approximately one white registrant in nine has been returned by induction center physicians, the figures up to this month being 228 rejected of 1,823 white men approved by local boards. Colored rejections at induction centers have averaged 40 per cent, officials pointed out.

All white replacements for February and March had been completed yesterday, Lieut. Col. Edward Beitleheim, jr., said. One colored replacement for February and 57 for March remain to go, he added.

An additional District quota of May inductees was announced last night by Third Corps headquarters in Baltimore. To be inducted on May 21, 22 and 23 are 385 white and 150 colored registrants from Washington. This will bring the total of District selectees in service to 3,686, with the quota to be filled by July 1 at 3,982.

12 Replacements Go

Meanwhile, 12 replacements, three white and nine Negro, were sent to Baltimore yesterday and 10 colored replacements prepared to be inducted there today.

To fill existing draft board vacancies, three Washington businessmen were named by District Selective Service headquarters yesterday.

They are: Walter Bastian, former president of the District Bar Association, as Government appeal agent for local Board 22, to succeed George Boswell; Joseph A. Herbert, real estate operator, as a member of Board 17, to succeed William N. Payne, jr., and William M. Murray, of the firm of Murray & Heister, Inc., as a member of Board 20, to replace James A. Edmunds.

Guard Report Denied

At the same time, headquarters denied a report that National Guardmen face a draft call after one year in camp. Brig. Gen. Albert I. Cox pointed out that guardsmen enlist for three years and may be held on camp after the present one-year arrangement, for an additional period up to three years, but are not subject to call by Selective Service headquarters after guard service.

Colored registrants, all from Board 11, to be inducted in Baltimore today are:

Lonnie D. Masksul, Lawrence W. H. Browne, Thomas M. Pryor, George W. Reid, Willie Ballard, Thomas F. Vines, Elmore N. White, Jodie G. Ferguson, James L. McLean, jr., and Charles R. Key.

Doctors and Dentists Named to Boards

Sixteen physicians and 24 dentists were named yesterday by the Commissioners to local medical advisory boards of the Selective Service program.

Names of the appointees were submitted to the Commissioners by Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, director of District Selective Service. The appointees are:

Advisory Board A—Drs. Alva D. Daughton, Louis G. Weller, jr., Thomas A. Eagan, Eugene Taylor, Henry T. Kuleshner, T. Fraser Williams and G. Roland Gable.

Advisory Board B—Drs. John A. Reed, Irving Brotman and Homer King Vann.

Advisory Board C—Leslie H. French, John A. Reisinger, Richard L. Dechaussure, Henry T. Miller, Charles W. Tesse and Frederick Moreuil.

Dentists named were:

Advisory Board A—Drs. M. F. Brushart, S. J. Eamich, J. R. Hogan, F. B. Netherland, O. H. Wendt, E. E. Merriman, Louis M. Chevillier and Irving Blamer.

Advisory Board B—Drs. Dudley T. King, Joseph Manley, William Brooks, Charles E. Coulon, Norris H. Atkins, Fletcher Barber, William T. Randall and Otis J. Williams.

America First Talks to Be Led by Landon

By the Associated Press

Topeka, April 28.—Alf M. Landon has accepted an invitation to preside at a Kansas City (Mo.) America First Committee meeting May 2 at which Senator Bennett C. Clark will be the principal speaker.

The former Kansas Governor and 1936 Republican Presidential nominee at first declined but reconsidered, he said today, "in the furtherance of tolerance and freedom of speech."

In a letter to Ray Moseley, chairman of the Kansas City America First Committee, Landon said:

"It is shocking to see the smearing campaign that is being conducted against those who are simply exercising the prerogatives of every American citizen by speaking their honest convictions on the greatest issue that can ever confront a people—that of peace or war.

"Obviously there is an attempt to smear everyone who dares stick up his head in opposition to war. But the time for free discussion has not yet passed."

Wheeler Assails Convoy Idea

Rockford, Ill., April 28 (AP).—Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, said today that President Roosevelt "may have the power" to carry on an undeclared war "if the Army and the Navy follow his commands," but that he has no right to do so.

Wheeler, here for an address tonight, said in an interview:

"Under the Constitution the President has no right to carry on an undeclared war and no right to send the Army and the Navy into combat zones.

"He may have the power to do it if the Army and the Navy follow his commands, but he has no right to do so."

Wheeler added that he assumed that the Army and Navy would follow the President's commands but "I cannot believe that the President would order the Army or the Navy into combat zones because he has said that convoying means shooting and shooting means war."

Parley Backs Deferment Of Internes

Local draft and appeals boards deferment of medical students and interns to allow completion of their training, was approved in principle yesterday by the Conference of State and Provinchal Health Authorities of North America in the United States Public Health Service Auditorium.

Approximately 70 health officials from sections of the United States, Canada and Alaska gathered for the meeting, which will be followed by an executive session today.

Army, Navy and Selective Service officials were asked to approve deferment requests of medical students and interns, to be made on an individual basis, in another resolution by the conference.

Approval in principle was given also to an amendment by Dr. Morris Fishbein of the American Medical Association to a bill, S. 783, submitted by Senator Murray (Democrat), of Montana. This amendment provides for exemption of medical and dental students and teachers in approved schools and for an opportunity for commissions in the Reserve Corps of the Army and Navy for medical school graduates who are eligible for license in a majority of States. Medical graduates who could not qualify for commissions would be subject to induction under provisions of the Selective Service Act.

The May Bill, which authorizes the Secretaries of War and Navy to supress prostitution in established zones surrounding military camps and naval stations, also was approved by the conference.

Lamont Calls For 'Immense, Speedy Aid'

By the United Press

Detroit, April 28.—Great Britain and China will win the new world war that "is closing in on us" if the United States grants them "immense and speedy' aid, Thomas W. Lamont, vice chairman of the board of J. P. Morgan & Co., said today.

Lamont, in an address prepared for delivery to the Economic Club, said that Americans would "live to challenge those amateur strategists and defeatists in our community who are crying that England is already lost.'

Desire for return of liberty among Europe's conquered people and "the indomitable, unconquerable spirit of the British people, the heroism and dogged resistance of China to Japan, backed by America's determination not to surrender the sea lanes of the Atlantic and the Pacific, will spell the ultimate victory in both East and West," Lamont said.

He held that the recent Russo-Japanese neutrality pact must be "taken very seriously",but believed Japan would move cautiously on any southward expansion if Britain "is gradually gaining the upper hand."

"The Japanese are standing on a suicide rock," Lamont said. "Every instinct ought to be telling them to turn back, to take the long view, to join the powers that must eventually gain this world struggle."

The United States "is gradually being hemmed in by a world war that is drawing dangerously close to us," he said.

"We Americans have intervened in this war with all our material resources because we cannot permit the mastery of the Atlantic to fall into hostile hands, men whose avowed object is to enslave the smaller nations and utterly destroy our way of life. It was the same in 1917."

"All aid to China," Lamont said, would help "render Japan's Axis efforts futile."

He appealed for support of the newly formed United China Relief.

St. James's Wort Just 'Stinking Willie' to U. S.

In the last 300 years, 1,000 European weeds, many of which were handsome flowers at home, have invaded the United States, Dr. M. L. Fernauld, of Harvard University, said in a report of the Smithsonian Institution issued yesterday.

Dr. Fernald called attention to St. James's wort ,an attractive English plant, which has become known to American farmers as "stinking Willie." Others he mentioned were dandelion, burdock, white daisy, witch grass, Canada thistle, plantain, pigweed, dock and the devil's paint brush, with its orange and scarlet blossoms.

"Their army is reinforced," he added, "by every arrival of uncleaned European seeds, in the stockings, trouser bottoms, skirt hems and blankets of immigrants, and in the litter and old straw used in packing from abroad."

J. M. Keynes Planning Visit to Washington

London (Tuesday), April 29 (U.P.). The ministry of information announced today that J. M. Keynes, one of Britain's most distinguished economists, was about to make a brief visit to Washington.

It said he was going at the request of Sir Kingsley Wood, chancellor of the exchequer, to confer with American authorities on the operation of the lease-lend bill and related matters.

The treasury was known to be studying an accounting system for the transfer of goods under the Lease-Lend Act.

Gen. Sultan to Command 38th; Replaces National Guard Officer

Assignment of Maj. Gen. Daniel I. Sultan yesterday to command the Thirty-eighth Division at Camp Shelby, Miss., a National Guard unit, aroused speculation here that the War Department was dissatisfied with the progress of the guard in its training.

Sultan, former District Engineer Commissioner and a Regular Army officer, was named to succeed Maj. Robert H. Tyndall in command of the Kentucky, Indiana and West Virginia guardsmen. Tyndall is retiring for age, in accordance with law, but normally an officer of the National Guard would be named to succeed him.

Officials of the National Guard Bureau at the War Department would not comment yesterday on the selection of a regular to head the Thirty-eighth Division, declaring they had not heard of it before the announcement was made. All the other 17 guard divisions are headed by Guardsmen.

Nor was there any official comment from any departmental source on the talk that the high command was dissatisfied with the progress of any the State troops since their induction into Federal service.

Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, recently told the Senate Defense Investigating Committee that the morale of the guard was very high, and that while the men needed hardening and further training, he hoped to see them round into shape by summer.

Overton Hearings Off For 2 Weeks

forecast in the House when Representative Raymond S. Springer (Republican), of Indiana, and Representative Edward H. Rees (Republican), of Kansas, joined in attacks on the measure.

Speaking in connection with a bill he introduced yesterday to raise the District gasoline tax 2 cents a gallon, Springer declared his proposal would "reduce the large Federal contribution made each year to the District."

Springer declared that a 4-cent gasoline tax here would compare with gas taxes in many States. He called the present 2-cent tax here "unfair," declaring that residents of the States "must make a huge contribution to the District while the District pays a small fuel tax."

Rees called for House support for a second tax bill which he dropped into the hopper yesterday. The measure would raise the $1.75 per $100 realty tax in the District to $2.50 and would make the rate apply to personal property also.

Rees said he offered the tax bill as an alternative to the Overton bill. Residents of Washington, he said, do not pay their share of taxes and he suggested that the Overton formula might be applied, with equal justice, to other cities where there are Federal buildings.

He said he wanted to know why real etsate values here have dropped $55,000 since 1932. Washington, he stated, is the "boom town of the Nation."

Apparently unaware that Chairman Randolph, of the House District Committee, and House leaders had agreed to withhold the Overton bill until the next District Day, May 12, foes of increased Federal funds for the city government were primed for an attack.

Representative Everett M. Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, took the floor during debate of the blackout bill to call for decentralization of nondefense functions of the Federal Government. He told the House that conduct of many Federal activities outside Washington would relieve overcrowding in the District and "give these people here a chance to breathe."

Citing the increase of Federal workers in Washington from 65,437 in June, 1933, to 186,000 now, or 70,000 above the peak of World War employment, Dirksen declared:

"We ought to attend to the blackout of inefficiency in the seat of government."

Sears Will Defer Expansion Despite Sharp Sales Rise

New York, April 28 (AP).—Gen. Robert E. Wood, chairman of the board of Sears, Roebuck & Co., said today the big mail order house "planned to postpone further expansion this year because of international uncertainties and the outlook for taxes," despite a 29 per cent increase in sales.

Gen. Wood told the company's annual meeting that while profits before taxes for February 1 to April 23, 1941, were 80 per cent larger than for the same period in 1940, the prospect of new and higher taxes made it impossible to estimate capital stock earnings. (Net profit in the three months ended April 30, 1940, was $7,641,000, or $1.35 a capital share.)

Even with stringent taxes, he said, earnings for the quarter should be as good and possibly better than a year ago. Sales in the quarter, he said, were 29 per cent above the same quarter in 1940.

Haitians Sing to Voodoo Gods As Jungle Drums Beat at Party

VOODOO DANCE—Haitians dance to the beat of primitive drums in the Carlton's banquet hall

Three drums that looked like logs were beaten for half an hour in the Carlton Hotel banquet hall yesterday while 17 Haitians sang and danced to old Voodoo gods in a wild, strange transplanting of jungle magic to a room full of chandeliers.

It was Elie Lescot's party. He is the Haitian Minister and President-elect of Haiti. His guests included State Department representatives, among them Assistant Secretary of State Sumner Welles; the Mexican Ambassador, and representatives from the Central American republics, members of Congress and a room full of others.

The party included caviar and other things on a table a third of a block long, hard by a lighted fountain running rum punch and ably patronized. Guests said it outdid any seen around here recently.

Incipient Jungle Fever

But they weren't kicked much by the rum punch. Lescot had a subtler way. Out of the service entrance, when the party was nearly over, he trooped in the Haitians in native costume. They weren't professionals but boys and girls from the bush, the best dancers in the bush but still not professionals.

They didn't look at the audience nor seem to care whether they had one. Somehow back among the dishes and soup spoons they must have worked themselves into incipient jungle fever because they had it when they arrived on the party floor. The boys looked wild-eyed and the girls' eyes seemed looking for dim moons with birds flying across them and the boys wriggled their bared black toes as if trying to get a better toe-hold before putting a finished hex on somebody.

They didn't ask anybody when to start, apparently already having begun inside themselves and no one knew exactly that they had finished, when the finish came. The audience had pushed almost against the low stage and still stood gaping for some moments after the troupe had gone.

How all this came about is easier explained by saying that the Haitian Minister had a swell party. But one lady, departing, claimed she had been hypnotized, a new adventure in the good neighbor policy technique.

"Driven to Drink by Drums"

Others believed they had been worked on by the drums and tried to count the beat the Haitians had used. But the beat, which sounded like five sharp strokes, had a hidden smaller beat somewhere that was hard to place and that became an obsession until after a while a man might be driven to the rum fountain only coherent enough to say "I've been driven to drink by drums."

And against the drum beats the Haitian girls danced and writhed, and one fell on the floor palpably voodooed so she had to be revived by the waving of a dark cloth, and then the drums grew so insidious a Haitian man fell out and had to be revived by vocal incantations and then the audience tried to find the hidden drum beat and it must have worked on some of the patrons out in the lobby because they stood in the door.

The president-elect put on a party and the Haitians will be around town long enough to appear at the National Folk Festival May 1-2-3 in Constitution Hall. It was explained that the Haitians didn't believe in Voodooism. It's just an old dance they like to break out occasionally.

Fire Destroys Ether Plant At Indianhead Powder Works

Fire of undetermined origin early yesterday destroyed the five-story ether house at the Navy's Indianhead (Md.) powder plant, inflicting damage estimated at $150,000. The Navy Department said "there is absolutely no suspicion of sabotage."

Capt. M. L. Hersey, jr., inspector of ordnance in charge of the plant, reported that only three employes were working in the building at the time and all escaped unhurt "through regular exits." He said 100 to 150 employes manned fire hose and were assisted by the La Plata (Md.) Volunteer Fire Department, which came to the scene after some of its members saw the blaze.

Capt. Hersey reported that a workman said he saw a spark in the building at 2:50 a. m., followed immediately by fire. The blaze was out at 4:45 a. m. without damage to any other buildings at the plant.

No interruption to work at the powder factory will be caused by the fire, the Navy Department said. The building destroyed was used in rectifying ether for use in manufacture of powder.

29 Sewing Machines Stolen From Factory

Special Dispatch to The Post

Frederick, Md., April 28.—State police and county authorities were without a clew today in the theft of 29 sewing machines from a garment factory at Woodsboro over the weekend. The machines are valued at approximately $2,000 by Marlin Shriner, Taneytown, owner of the plant. Robbers apparently backed a truck to the rear of the building, removed the machines from work benches and drove off. New machines were being installed today.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Fathers and Sons Have Big Night in Prospect

Showmanship to Rule Mayflower Sunday Night; Another 'Sneak Preview' at Uptown Tonight; This, That and the Other About the Theater

WHAT WE SEEM TO HAVE IGNORED with peculiar persistence is the fact that the eighteenth annual renewal of the Fathers and Sons Banquet, sponsored by the Brotherhood of the Washington Congregation, will be celebrated in the Mayflower Hotel next Sunday evening, beginning at 6.

BELL

This may appear to some to be a strange item for a theatrical column. It seems to us to belong. There is always a tremendous amount of drama in the camaraderie of fathers and sons and, beyond that, General Chairman Sidney B. Lust, a bit of a showman on his account, always rigs the thing up in such a way that it seems more like a circus than a banquet. This year will be no exception—except for one thing.

Instead of a circus, this year's observance of this warm-hearted event will take the form of a "Showboat." There will be bales of cotton, gangplanks, a real paddle-wheel and other "atmospheric" touches to give the occasion the flavor of the old Deep South—or, perhaps, you remember showboats on the Potomac or Chesapeake Bay, as well as plying up and down the Swanee.

The star performer of the evening will be Clyde Beatty, that intrepid animal trainer who barges in where more angelic souls fear to tread, and it is said that he will bring along with him a real, live baby elephant. Distinguished citizens, noted members of the sports world, most of the personnel of the Johnny Jones Exposition, owned and operated by Washington's E. Lawrence Phillips, and approximately a million "added attractions" will serve to make this Fathers and Sons Banquet something to be remembered as long as they live by both Dad and Junior.

It is expected that some 1,000 guests will jam the Mayflower ballroom on this gala night. The spirit of these annual get-togethers of two generations is something that is not easily shaken off.

Still "Hope for a Harvest"

Those who missed Fredric March and Florence Eldridge in "Hope for a Harvest," at the National last week, still have a chance. While this Theater Guild-American Society play is in Pittsburgh this week, it bounces back to Baltimore next and will hold the boards at Ford's. Bess Davis Schreiner, subscription sales manager for both Washington and Baltimore, holds out promise that she might supply first aid in the Monumental City to those who failed to see "Hope for a Harvest," while it was here.

We already have said something about Gracie Fields' most popular and highest salaried English Singing comedienne, being in town for the Actors' Fund Benefit, to be given in the National Theater on Sunday night, May 11, as a memorial to the late Daniel Frohman. So there comes along another letter from Keane Waters stating that Vinton Freedley, who seems to have a considerable finger in this year's goings-on, also has promised Georgie Jessel, Mary Jane Walsh and Sheila Barrett for the same night, with other great names to follow.

It is a disturbing circumstance—"distressing" might be the better word—that this department, owing to unfortunate developments entirely beyond its control, has not had an opportunity to view the production of "Cook Book," put on at Catholic University by Father Gilbert Hartke's Harlequins. As everybody must know by now, it celebrates the life and professional career of Joe Cook, headlining this week's stage bill at the Earle Theater. In its week's run, the colorful production has smashed all previous box-office records piled up by the University Theater. The jovial Mr. Cook has stepped ahead of the veteran Mr. Cohan by exceeding the "take" of the Harlequins' last year's production of "Yankee Doodle Boy." "Cook Book" will extend its run through tomorrow night.

Don't Sleep on This One!

Washington theatergoers will have what possibly will be their only opportunity to see the George S. Kaufman-Moss Hart Broadway hit, "George Washington Slept Here," when it is presented on May 15, 16 and 17 by the Cue and Curtain Club, drama group of George Washington University. The comedy has just about completed its first year in New York and will not be sent touring professionally. Cue and Curtain enjoys the sole local rights, having sent a representative to New York to secure the privilege of the three-night run.

In step with World War II, it's "Blackout" time at the Little Theater for the second week in a row, as the tingling British spy-thriller holds over. Starring Conrad Veidt and Valerie Hobson, "Blackout" is the latest of the gay, wartime melodramas—if a wartime melodrama finds it within its power to be gay—to come from the other side.

Somewhere in France, in the years 1939 and 1940, there probably prevailed in the French Republic some such confusion as characterized the Theater Guild's production of "Somewhere in France," revealed for the first time on any stage in the National Theater last night.

This new play, in three acts and four scenes, by Carl Zuckmayer and Fritz Kortner, seemed last evening to be oddly lacking in definite direction, cohesiveness and that centralization of intellectual and emotional appeal that drives home a sturdy message addressed to a concrete and single purpose. It was one, minute a love story, a political document the next and, finally, a lengthy and verbose bit of incoherence that seemed to have nothing specific to say and said it far too voluminously.

There were rumors afloat before the premiere that "Somewhere in France" was rushed to its opening in Washington by reason of its timeliness and significance. The grapevine even whispered that it was so eloquent upon the topic of the downfall of France that it would serve as an invaluable lesson to America in present circumstances. These elements of strength and vital importance somehow failed to assert themselves last night. There is, to be sure, a tinge of the "Fifth Column" in the work and there is a deal of the controversial viewpoints of the "little people" of France that may have had something to do with the debacle that removed England's supposedly stanchest ally from the present war, but at no time is there that driving, hard-hitting impact upon American consciousness that might by any stretch of the most flexible imagination be construed as valuable "propaganda" on behalf of an "awakened" United States.

Employs a Huge Cast

The three acts of "Somewhere in France" encompass a tremendous diffusion of interest. The play is peopled by an enormous cast of characters and not too many of them seem to be following any defined course. As the thing turns out, it is far more a simple love story than it is an involved political treatise.

This may not with reason be attributed to the excellent cast assembled by the Guild for the interpretation of the Messrs. Zuckmayer and Kortner's strangely rambling contemplation of the France that existed before its conquest by the Nazi hordes. Last night's performance was executed with rare skill by an able group of players who were handicapped not by their individual of collective inabilities, but by the deficiency of the authors in the matter of making clear what it was they were trying to say.

A great deal looking toward the salvage of a conspicuously weak piece of playwriting, needless to say, can be done by judicious pruning and a more concise definition of purpose. Many of the roles are ineffectually wordy and can be cut to more intelligible dimensions. Whole scenes might be dropped to advantage. What will come out of it all remains to be seen. Certainly what already has come out of it is evidence that the Theater Guild has a fine eye for choosing competent players.

Digges Does Stellar Work

Dudley Digges, who would be star of the play except that the Guild never stars even its most distinguished mimes, does yeoman's service in attempting to make a role of paternal devotion seem something more than a mere gesture of family pride and the urge to defeat the fundamental aims of the nation that has made him a prosperous innkeeper. Kathryn Givney, as his wife, offers a comparably fine portrayal of the drudge who has saved enough out of the family income to bring hope of the rescue of her son from a position before the firing squad.

There are numerous others who strive diligently to give impetus to a drama which, at present seems to lack both starting and terminal facilities. Foremost among these are Walter Slezak, the borer from within; Alexander Knox, as trenchant as always as a French patdiot; Arline Francis, remembered long from the radio hours, in the role of Odette; Flora Campbell, last seen here in "Glamour Preferred," as Fleur, and Karen Morley, more famed on the screen than the stage, in the pivotal feminine role of Marie. But the best of them all, always excepting Mr. Digges, is Wesley Addy, who gives an uncommonly vigorous and forthright characterization of the vital part of the son, Andre Marignac. Art Smith, Clay Clement, Robert Harrison, Jack Mylong-Muenz, Robert Bromley and Victor Thorley also contribute generously to scenes that are not dramatically commensurate with their obvious capabilities.

The four scenes of the three acts are set in Gustave Merignac's tavern, near Rheims, in France, nicely set up by Watson Barratt with a keen sense of "atmosphere." But even that, in combination with the fine work of one of the most impressive casts of the sason, is not enough to write "Somewhere in France" down in the hit column as it stands at the moment.

AN INVITATION to a dinner at the home of Lieut. Gov. Charles Poletti, who seated me next to a charming lady . . . She expressed some suriosity about my work, and I proceeded to tell her all about the newspaper business—for almost two hours. "And so," I concluded finally, "there you have the newspaper business" . . . She then spoke to a tall, distinguished-looking man across the table. "What does he do?" I whispered . . . "He's my husband," she explained—Charles Merz, editor of the New York Times.

A COLORED PRINT, which we bough for 3 francs in a curio shop in Montmartre—on the night we were to have seen the real Paris. Le Journal's American correspondent, Musnick, had promised to show us the real city free of the tourist taint . . . And so we had climbed the long steps that wind to the Sacre Couer, and there in the Place du Tertre danced the people of France—laughing workers, in shirt sleeves, celebrating the 300th anniversary of their district's admittance into the commune of Paris . . . "See?" said Musnick, leading us to the curio shop from whose steps we could get a better view. "See? Just as I told you. No tourist. Paris free of tourist influence" . . . From around the corner came a long cigar, soon followed by its smoker—Joe Schenck. His companion was Darryl Zanuck.

A SNAPSHOT taken at the Sun and Surf Club in July, 1934 . . . For weeks before that the editorials had been attacking Magistrate David Hirshfield because he administered jail sentences to boys in Coney Island who were found guilty of dropping the shoulder straps of their bathing suits . . . The Sunday the magistrate dozed in a beach chair. The shoulder straps of his bathing suit were down. I took four photographs of him that way, rushed back to the city with the film and delivered it to my editor . . . But that same day John Dillinger was killed in Chicago. For the ensuing days every available inch of space was devoted to the Dillinger story—and my photos never were published. Three days later the magistrate permitted shoulders to be bared in Coney Island.

A REPORT CARD covering a semester at St. John's College School of Law . . . One the eve of the real property exam, I had raised my hand timidly and asked one question. Prof. Maurice Finkelstein responded by announcing to the class: "Here's one student who won't pass the real property examination. And furthermore," he added—pointing to me—"I doubt seriously, that you have the makings of a lawyer" . . . I treasured the report card which came in June. "Real property—97, highest in the class. Average, all courses—second highest in the class" . . . In due time I was admitted to the bar and practiced law, until I became a columnist, in 1934 . . . Many months ago, at the Versailles, I saw Prof. Finkelstein again—and sent him a note: "Remember me?" . . . "Of course," he replied. "And wasn't I right? You're not practicing law."

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, April 28 (1935).—Bruce Cabot can thank his lucky stars for Joe Pasternak. At the time Joe decided to give Bruce the male lead opposite Marlene Dietrich in "The Flame of New Orleans," there was a lot of criticism and some of it unnecessarily unkind. One writer said Bruce was no draw at the box-office and that he was more interested in costarring with pretty girls in night clubs than he was in his career. But what a change since the preview of "The Flame of New Orleans!"

LOUELLA PARSONS

He is so good in Pasternak's drama—such a definite he-man personality with a Gable appeal—that over the weekend Walter Wanger signed him on a long-term contract. Bruce will have the male lead in either "Sundown" or "Eagle Squadron."

So far the movie separation of Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy hasn't caused a ripple among the fans. Probably because Jeanette and Nelson have solo pictures of equal importance. Jeanette stars in "Smilin' Thru," with Brian Aherne. Nelson Eddy will play with Rise Stevens, Metropolitan Opera singer, in "The Chocolate Soldier."

Eddie Albert returns to the Warner Bros. lot tomorrow after being away ten days. I was sorry his illness made it impossible for him to be on our broadcast, "The Wagons Roll at Night," but Ronald Reagan did a splendid job. As for Humphrey Bogart, Mayo Methot and Joan Leslie, the telegrams prove stronger than any words how swell they were.

Chatter in Hollywood: For a period after Eddie Lowe and Rita Kaufman said adieu to marriage, Eddie flitted from night club to night club. But no longer. He is now concentrating on the very attractive Lady Thelma Furness. His car can be seen any day parked in front of her house and they frequently dine tete-a-tete at various cafes.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Cedric Gibbons, formerly wed to Dolores Del Rio, and Pat Dane are an item; the Errol Flynn-Lili Damita baby is expected in feur weeks; Patricia Morison has been told by her M. D, that she must stop dieting. She has taken off pounds and pounds and it isn't agreeing with her; Addison Randall has gone to New York and there is considerable debate in the town as to which one of the girl friends is the attraction.

Jean Kelly, Universal's seriel queen, and John Shelton, have been doing the night spots together; Carole Landis and George Montgomery teamed up for the Twentieth Century-Fox studio party at the Biltmore Bowl—and so did Cesar Romero and Janis Carter; Matty Fox, youthful production head at Universal, goes into the Army soon; Edgar Allan Woolf had a double celebration on his birthday—a cocktail party, given him at the Mocambo, and a dinner at the home of Mrs. Anatole Friedlander.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, April 28.

It looks as though Twentieth Century won't have to wait any longer for a star in "How Green Was My Valley."

HOPPER

They're so nerts about Walter Pidgeon that John Ford himself is trying to work out a deal with Metro to get him for the part. The only thing that might stymie the deal would be for the kids of America to call for another "Nick Carter." Knowing Walter as well as I do, I know he wouldn't disappoint them.

On April 4, on my air show, I reported the Jack Warners had definitely separated. When Jack Warner learned that I had broken the news, he called up, and in a voice you could have heard in mid-Pacific, declared there wasn't an atom of truth in the report. Just the usual run-around we always get when noted people separate. When will they learn the truth, since it's bound to come out anyhow? . . . I think everyone is sorry about the separation.

Over the weekend I spent an evening with some old friends, and whom should I find there but Georgie Grandee, the "half-pint" comedian. After supper Georgie played for us, all his own compositions and all of them tops. The longer you live in Hollywood, the less sense it makes. Here's a boy with two strings to his bow, acting and composing, atiractive to look at, grand personality, everybody likes him. Any number of directors and producers have raved over his music—songs that are perfect set-ups for Rudy Vallee, Bing Crosby, or Nelson Eddy. You'd think they'd have been snapped up months ago. You'd think his talent for light comedy would have put him on the screen, long before this, but no dice! As usual, somebody is asleep at the switch!

Wonder why Eddie Albert is getting the brush-off. He's got fourth billing in "The Wagons Roll at Night"—comes after 16-year-old Joan Leslie. I maintain it ain't cricket.

Will be happy seeing the Henry Luces, who are stopping over here en route to China. I missed Clare in Washington. She was at the National Press Club party, but by the time I'd waded through 700 women to find her, she was off to three other parties.

Montgomery Beer Setup Becomes Law

The controversial bill giving Montgomery County, Md., a monopoly of the beer business was signed yesterday by Gov. O'Conor and became law immediately as an emergency measure.

The measure provides for distribution of beer to retailers through the county dispensary system, which handles liquor sales.

At a hearing in Annapolis a week ago, the legislation was opposed by a delegation from the Montgomery County Taxpayers Association. They contended it would "confiscate" the businesses of approximately six wholesale beer distributors and that it was contrary to the recommendations of the recent Brookings Institution report on the government of the county.

The Brookings report, it was pointed out, urged the abolition of the county liquor control board.

The beer bill was included in the legislative program indorsed by the county Democratic Congress just prior to the recent session of the State Legislature. Supporters of the measure claim it will produce $75,000 annually in revenue to the county. A substantial profit is claimed from county liquor sales.

The only member of the county delegation to the Legislature who opposed the measure was Charles C. Jones, antiorganization Democrat. Jones said last night he regretted the bill had become law because he was opposed to "putting beer under political control." Montgomery, he said, was the only county in the State which had a monopoly of the beer business.

Germantown Painter Charged In Bethesda Woman's Slaying

Dewey Thompson, 43-year-old painter of Germantown, Md., last night was charged with murder in the fatal shooting of Mrs. Clara Robertson, 36, of Bethesda, in an argument Sunday at the Germantown home of John B. Thompson, father of Dewey.

The husband of the dead woman, John Robertson, who suffered two shotgun wounds at the same time, was reported to be in "fair" condition at the Montgomery County General Hospital, Sandy Spring.

The murder warrant against the younger Thompson was sworn out by Officers Earl Stearn and William Broschart. Thompson will be held without bail at the Rockville jail for the next grand jury term.

Police said the shooting grew out of an argument over Thompson's arrest a week ago on a charge of being drunk and disorderly.

Draft Objectors Enter Md. Camp About May 15

Baltimore, April 28 (AP).—Dr. Ernest Wildman, director of the Patapsco State Park Camp, said today that the first contingent of conscientious objectors was expected there about May 15.

Maryland local draft boards were ordered today to call up objectors to be sent to the camp for their "year of service." Four Maryland men will be among those ordered to report.

The objectors, whom Dr. Wildman said would eventually total 125, will report directly to State Selective Service headquarters, where officials will turn them over to the American Friends Service Committee. They will not undergo usual induction routine or come under authority of Army officers.

Colonel Lindbergh

Axis propagandists have played up Col. Lindbergh's remarks for all they are worth, not only in the press of Germany and Italy, and in the satellite nations of the European continent, but in Latin America as well. Writing from Quito, Ecuador, for instance, Harold Callender, of the New York Times, declares that Col. Lindbergh's utterances and those of his wife "have been widely reproduced in the pro-German press in South America," and that he "again makes the first pages of all newspapers with statements like those the Germans and pro-Germans have been making."

This is very disturbing news at a time when our national policy rests upon continental solidarity. In undermining a declared national policy, and in making himself the spokesman of a point of view which gives such valuable aid and comfort to the enemies of mankind, Col. Lindbergh has taken a very considerable responsibility upon himself. What makes his position all the more vulnerable is that with all his plain speaking of the last two years he has never voiced a syllable of protest against Nazi actions which have outraged civilized opinion. This is something to ponder over. Equally astonishing is the fact that, while saying that the downfall of Britain would be a tragedy for us, he takes such a negative position as an amateur policy-maker toward preventing it.

Now, in pique over a remark made on the subject of defeatists by President Roosevelt at a recent press conference, Col. Lindbergh has resigned his commission in the Army Air Corps Reserve. The rightness or wrongness of his action is a subsidiary matter, though it might be pointed out that had he been called into active service, as has happened to so many other reserve officers, he could not have been able to make the speeches he has been making. Our main concern is that this action, too, will be seized upon by Axis propagandists to persuade their gullible dupes that the United States is a Nation divided within itself. Thus the colonel continues, wittingly or unwittingly, to be the most effective ally of the Axis standpoint on the war in this country. It is not the least tragic aspect of the situation that he is so firmly and so honestly convinced that in so doing he is rendering patriotic service to the Nation.

Encouraging Crime

In a single day last week the District Court let off ten men found guilty of 59 crimes with shockingly light sentences. One youthful bandit, for example, received concurrent sentences of one to three years imprisonment for each of ten robberies. Incredible as this seems, another youth responsible for six automobile thefts was granted probation after being given six concurrent sentences of imprisonment running from only two to six months. These and other cases will make disheartening reading for the law enforcement agencies and the law abiding citizens of the District. It is bad enough to know that only about one person in five who commits a felony in the District is eventually imprisoned. It is equally discouraging to know that criminals who are apprehended and convicted have an excellent chance of getting off with utterly inadequate sentences.

This sort of thing is becoming a crying scandal. In a recent survey the Washington Criminal Justice Association called attention to the record of leniency toward persons convicted of serious offenses. During the October term of the District Court, for example, one judge granted probation to 65 out of 146 major offenders; another judge put 61 out of 185 persons sentenced on probation. The offenses for which probation was granted included housebreaking, larceny, assault with a dangerous weapon, forgery, robbery, joyriding and gambling. Moreover, many of the persons put on probation had previous police records. In most cases the penitentiary sentences imposed by the two judges whose records were surveyed were likewise very inadequate in relation to the seriousness of the crimes. The Criminal Justice Association was especially sharp in its criticism of the very common local practice of imposing concurrent sentences for multiple offenses. It pointed out that a criminal is actually encouraged to commit more crimes if the sentence is the same for several offenses as for one.

Evidently, however, informed criticism of this sort has made little impression upon some local justices, judged from last week's record. Valid arguments for letting first offenders off comparatively lightly do not apply to chronic offenders with long police records. They have to be dealt with severely, not for the purpose of individual punishment, but out of regard for the community on which such people prey. Crime is certain to flourish where the risks are few and the chances of ill-gotten gain good. On both counts Washington offers attractions to the criminal who makes a living out of victimizing the public.

A Bite For A Bark

There was a welcome forthrightness in William C. Bullitt's reference to the Russo-Japanese neutrality pact in his United China Relief speech. In some quarters the tendency has been to play it down. Even Secretary Hull, a man who has hitherto been in the vanguard of those who have accented the crisis of our world situation, minimized it. Therefore, Mr. Bullitt's realism was doubly welcome.

We all know, of course, that the pact has not bonded Moscow and Tokyo in a blood brotherhood. Concretely the Japanese would hardly dare to move many of the half million troops which have been waiting and watching, hawk-eyed, on the Siberian frontier. That, however, is not the point. By this agreement, as Mr. Bullitt said, Japan and the Soviet Union have "at least become brother bandits at the expense of China." The Soviet Union has obtained Japanese recognition of the Soviet's seizure of Outer Mongolia, a Chinese province which Moscow has hitherto recognized explicitly as belonging to China. In return the Soviet has recognized the Japanese seizure of what used to be China's Manchuria. And, more importantly, an agreement between the Soviet and China's enemy must imperil (in spite of Moscow's assurances to the contrary) China's overland source of military supplies from Soviet Russia, a source which, with the Burma Road, is vital to China's war making.

Since the sustenance of Chinese belligerency is a prime object of our national policy, anything that worsens China's position must be of great importance to our country. Doubtless the glossing over of the significance of the Russo-Japanese neutrality pact had its origin in chagrin over Stalin's seeming about-face. It occurred as a bolt from the blue in the midst of a little warming up on our part toward the Soviet Union. It was for this reason that the press in both Tokyo and Moscow called the agreement a blow at our diplomacy. For some time past some of our policy-makers had hoped that Stalin might follow our policy line in the Far East. Why there should ever have been any such hope is difficult to say. Clearly Stalin is pursuing and will continue to pursue a thoroughly independent course of action. Expediency is his god, bigger and better wars for others his goal. He put a match to the world conflagration and his policy is to keep the conflagration going. As Mr. Bullitt, who knows Moscow intimately, said, "the Communist state is the enemy of all men who live in freedom."

The Russo-Japanese neutrality pact, accordingly, has given us a new measure of Soviet duplicity. Let us hope we shall not unlearn it. From now on we must reckon with both Japan and the Soviet Union as states with whose policies we can have no truck. Certainly we must cure ourselves of any lingering hope that Stalin would ever help to carry out American policy. The carrying out of American policy is our function, and we have the overwhelming resources to fulfill our policy unaided by dictators engaged in preying upon peace-loving nations and reaping the fruits of aggression. Mr. Bullitt outlined the only course which will make our policy effective. This is to "keep open the life lines to Great Britain and China and support those countries with all our strength." The alternative, as is becoming crystal clear to the American people, is "to fight alone—and soon—in this hemisphere against the united forces of the dictators."

If, as we believe, there can be no dodging this choice, our policy must march at an equal tempo with the encircling war. For instance, the signature of the Russo-Japanese pact should have been greeted immediately by an American riposte, not by an American explanation. For too long the initiative in these provocative actions has been monopolized by the Axis powers and their stooge in Moscow. Specifically we ought to send a squadron of our Navy to Singapore and declare at the same time that we intend to buttress the British defense of Singapore. If we do this, we shall help to rally Turkey in defending the Straits; we shall help to maintain the vital Australian-Mediterranean line of communication; we shall assure China that we intend to keep open the Burma Road, which would be put out of action by any power in control at Singapore (let alone, as Mr. Bullitt said, of Burma); and we shall call the bluff of the Japanese expansionists. These latter gentry get most of their hearing in Japan because they argue that the American bark carries no bite.

For Hellas

Sir, if a state submit
At once, she may be blotted out at once,
And swallowed in the conqueror's chronicle.
Whereas in wars of freedom and defense
The glory and grief of battle won or lost
Solders a race together—yea—tho' they fail,
The names of those who fought and fell are like
A bank'd up fire that flashes out again
From century to century, and at last
Will lead them on to victory.

The Fight For Suez

In his radio address on Sunday Winston Churchill made no attempt to hide from his people the grim prospects that now face them in the Mediterranean. He cited the dangers that threaten Egypt, the possibility that the war might spread to Spain and Morocco or eastward to Turkey and Russia. Germany, he said, might dominate the Black Sea and the Caspian, seize the granaries of the Ukraine and the oil wells of the Caucasus. He made no promise that Great Britain would or could avert any such developments. His only promise was that "we shall do our best to meet them and fight them wherever they go."

Britain's best may not be good enough to prevent the Germans from ultimately achieving mastery of the Mediterranean, no more than it was good enough to keep them from overrunning Yugoslavia and Greece. Hitler has a vast pool of trained military man power he can now employ for new ventures. He has a whole continent to draw on for supplies. His victory in the Balkans has given the German Wehrmacht additional bases from which to harass the British fleet and attack its principal base at Alexandria. Besides, the events of the last three weeks may have weakened the opposition of Spain and Turkey to the transit of German troops across their territory and of the Vichy government to more active collaboration with the Third Reich.

It must not be assumed, however, that the debacle in Yugoslavia and Greece has reduced the British in the Mediterranean to a status of helplessness. On the contrary, the capture of Suez, which may be Hitler's next goal, and the one without which any other gains in the Mediterranean would have only limited value, may prove a difficult nut for the German army to crack. Churchill has revealed how small a force made up the Army of the Nile at the time of its triumphant march across Cyrenaica. That force has since been considerably reduced both as to men and as to machines by Britain's venture in the Balkans. Yet even if it is assumed, as it is fair to assume, that Gen. Wavell's army in Egypt is considerably outnumbered by the force which the Axis is able to muster in Libya, the disparity is effectively reduced by the circumstance that the German and Italian supply problem, involving as it does a water passage and long and arduous land communications, is a serious one. Besides, the fall of Dessye, the last important town held by the Italians in Ethiopia, will hasten the release to the Egyptian theater of the British force which has been operating in East Africa.

The key to the Mediterranean struggle is to be found in Alexandria. As long as that remains in British hands, the British fleet can inflict serious blows on the Axis, as it did the other day when it gave Tripoli a fierce bombardment. Lacking sea power the Germans can only move on Alexandria over land—a task which, with each mile of Egyptian desert, would become more hazardous and costly. This is not to minimize the possibility of a German victory, for in his race to win before the American contribution to Great Britain becomes as great as it can ultimately become, Hitler may be prepared to make enormous sacrifies to achieve that goal. Churchill was thus not certainly drawing too dark a picture when he told his hard-pressed but defiant people that "we must now expect the war in the Mediterranean, on the sea, in the desert and above all in the air to become very fierce, varied and widespread."

TERRA INCOGNITA

This map of ancient Greece holds more
Than outlines of the Golden Age.
The history of every man

Men's lives are strangely circumscribed;
They call familiar things their own,
And carelessly dismiss all else
With scant attention, as unknown.

So, each man suffers lonely hours,
With only feeble words to chart
The unknown regions of the mind,
The hidden country of the heart.

Citizenship Tax

Congress is searching for new taxes. How about each citizen being required to pay what might be termed a "citizenship tax" equal in dollars each year to the number of billions in the Federal budget?

If the budget were 17 billion, each citizen would pay a "citizenship tax" of $17. If the budget were 10 billion, each citizen would pay $10.

With 75,000,000 citizens over 21 years of age, a "citizenship tax" of $17 per citizen would equal $1,275,000,000. This would be quite useful at this time.

Every citizen, regardless of age, occupation or income, would be required to pay this "citizenship tax." In this way each citizen would have impressed on him each year the size of his Federal budget. In this way each citizen would have a personal interest in economy and efficiency in the management of his Federal Government.

A Free People

The writer of a letter appearing in a newspaper recently, queries, "did we win our freedom, or are we still a British colony?" The answer is yes, we are free and hope to remain so, by giving all-out aid to Britain, just as the Commonwealths of Canada, Australia and New Zealand voted to fight Nazism, because they prefer their own form of free government to the enslavement they would experience under a successful Nazi state. Convoying ships would not mean war with Hitler now. He would not dare inflict his people with another enemy now, people whose nerves must be growing jumpy from the bombings they were repeatedly assured would never reach them. Another enemy, especially a powerful enemy such as we would be, might make even these obedient German people think. And that is the last thing Hitler wants. JANE O'RYAN.
New York, April 22.

Foreign War

Those who are opposed to all-out aid to Britain keep insisting continually that we are going over there . . . traveling 3,000 miles to wage war. And that this is unnecessary. This is involving the United States in a "foreign" war. Evidently for some people, a war is "foreign," if it is being fought a long distance from our shore. But if Britain goes down, because of lack of sufficient help from us, and Hitler comes to our shores, then mysteriously, the war becomes our war, a native war. So, one and the same war is both "foreign" and "native," which hardly is possible. It would seem, then, that common sense would suggest that we help all we can, quickly and thoroughly to keep the war a "foreign" one. DR. E. T. BURR.
New York City, April 21.

"Let's Be Americans"

Let's appeal to those we've chosen to pilot us through these rough seas. Let's ask them to say "Damn the torpedoes," and twist the old helm into the storm. Let's demand the instant erasure of the "short of war" blotch of yellow smeared all over the ancient colors upon which liberty has learned to lean when she's weary of the storms of raging ignorance that now beset her everywhere.

And here's an eternal prophecy. England will win over Germany. And let's redeem our faded honor as defenders of liberty, here at home. Let's be Americans—and exterminate the Nazi "educators."

JAKE YOO.
Farmington, Mo., April 24.

Auto Adjustment

The recently announced curtailment in automobile production seems to impress most master-minded columnists as something to be seized upon and waved frantically before ignorant and spell-bound readers as another horrible augur of approaching destruction. They would have us believe that the impact on our economic system of whatever we do in order to survive as Americans will be ruinous to our way of life.

Could it possibly be that the auto production curtailment is only an adjustment, and a most appropriate one, at that? There are said to be 1,500,000 men now in military camps, and this number is bound to increase. These men, at least temporarily, will not be in the market for the latest sport models. It appears possible, however, that they will have use for certain articles of a far different nature.

Is it "war-mongering" or "hysteria" to conclude that the automobile industry is merely making an adjustment to follow its market, thus avoiding creation of an unmarketable surplus? A. O. D.
Washington, April 23.

Help For The Feet

As one who knows from experience, I write to suggest that one of the best helps our newspapers could possibly render to national defense would be to tell our young "draftees"—and their parents as well—that those in training should oil their feet.

Napoleon told his troops always to oil their feet before a march; and the same advice is good today—especially with hot weather coming along.

Oiling the feet helps to prevent blisters, burns, corns, calluses, athlete's foot and other foot ailments and diseases—as well as to keep the feet always in clean and firm shape. All experienced fishermen and hunters and hikers and walkers oil their feet because they know from experience the awful results of walking on dry feet. Even the Bible teaches the good of anointing the feet with oil. JAMES LARWOOD.
Jackson Heights, N. Y., April 25.

For Convoys

Senator Tobey in his recent speech over the radio expressed opposition to convoys to Britain because he says war is a terrible thing. Why, Senator! Of course war is a terrible thing. But the real point is how much more terrible it would be over here than over there. And the only way to keep it over there—Nazi planes are flying now 1,000 miles from New Hampshire, and that's plenty near enough—is to convoy material aid to Britain just as fast as we can, and thus maintain our frontier on the other side of the Atlantic just as long as we can. Even a United States Senator should see that. COREY FORD.
Freedom, N. H., April 23.

Food Prices

The housewife reads with interest the pronouncements from high sources that profiteering in food stuffs will not be permitted and that commissions have been established to "watch" prices. The fact is that all food stuffs are going up steadily—butter and eggs, which should be cheaper in the spring, advance a cent at a time and often; coffee, which only a small part of the world is using, is doing the same; sugar, also, and in fact every thing on the grocers' shelves. But not salaries. What purpose do these commissions serve except to make jobs? HOUSEWIFE.
Washington, April 24.

Defends All-Day Parking

I note, in your article on the traffic survey, a box referring to the all-day parker as a "hog" who deprives shoppers and others of short-time parking spaces.

I don't have a car now because of circumstances beyond my control, but I drove in daily until last January, and when I get another auto I shall resume the practice. I work in the Interior Building, and it was my habit to park on the street, in an all-day parking zone, each day. I do not see how I was depriving anyone of their right to park and shop, inasmuch as the whole downtown area is a one-hour parking zone. On one side of my own building there is a 30-minute parking zone, the other three sides are one hour. There is ample space for those who have short business to attend to; those who stay longer generally get tickets.

I'm not speaking of this in an objective manner, either, as I have had days off when I wanted short-time space myself. I have never failed to find it, although I have had to drive around for several minutes occasionally before a space became vacant. I agree that the parking problem here is severe, but you can't blame the all-day parkers for that, as they are already forced to park on the fringes of the business area due to the one-hour parking zones. Extension of the one-hour zones might help, but the real solution is more off-street parking space at reasonable rates.

Of course, the ideal solution lies in subway construction. To this end, someone recently proposed an addition to the gasoline tax, the proceeds to be used for subway construction. Every driver that I have spoken to about this has told me that they would be only too willing to pay a couple of cents more on the gallon if it would go toward subway construction. I am an engineer, and I know that an excellent subway system could be built here, and paid for in 20 or 30 years, if such a tax were used to partially defray the initial cost.

Incidentally, I think the Capital Transit Co. is doing a wonderful job. I see quite a few complaints against them, but they are undoubtedly from people who do not appreciate the problems of mass transportation, particularly those problems peculiar to this city. If they would compare our public transportation with that of any other city of comparable size, they would find that Capital Transit is one of the leading traction companies in the country, despite the manner in which everything here is crowded in one small central area.

I might also add that the staggering of the hours has caused great improvement in transportation service for those in my office. Those people who are complaining about their service being poorer may be right, but they should also consider the tremendous increase in population here this spring, as well as the unusually large number of spring visitors. In the next two years transportation and traffic problems are going to get worse instead of better, and nothing can be done about it immediately. It takes a great deal of time to solve problems of this nature, and while these solutions are being worked out, local citizens are just going to have to grin and bear it.

Be A Doggerelist

Did you ever try writing jingles on the street car? If you are weary of being Atlas, you can take up doggerel and like it. It will take your mind off that steel stock that won't go up, the family budget, the baby's measles and the possibility of sonny's going to camp. It is all right now, too, since Robert Frost and Secretary Ickes have decided that Washington is "poetry conscious." Think up rhymes some morning about your fellow passengers or the imaginary ones flitting through your brain.

Doggerel writers have no reason to eschew the "cliche," the thing so emphasized by Prof. Baker. Hence, as a doggerelist, I step out buoyantly in favor of the trite and commonplace as being the piece de resistance of every man's daily life and conversation. However, do not imagine yourself a poetical Leander who can swim through a Hellespont of forms or you will find yourself in a Sargasso sea of trochees, triolets, iambics, anapests, rondeaus, sestinas and villanelles. Don't try enjambment, either, that run on lines is risky unless you know where you are running to. Avoid the caesura. That's tricky, too, for you might stop and not get started again. Another thing for the doggerelist to avoid is that 16-line superdreadnought known as the Petrarchian sonnet.

Be simple and sincere:

If I could write like FPA
And imitate those quips of his,
I'd write the stuff that fairly sings;
But I must write of homely things—
Like Ma and Pa and me and Liz.

Waiting for the street car at Fourteenth and Oak, one time, the breath of spring was in the air. I shall not call it an ode to spring but:

The shrubs all strut in bright array
As Spring swings to a rondelay;
The flowers defying winter chills
Are stepping out in pretty frills,
The crocuses and daffodils—
The trees, the last to put out buds,
Stand unconcerned about their duds.

Jostling around to find my traps I boarded an entirely different train of thought. Anent the passengers:

The busy lady sits and knits
A square or little stripe
As men who have a nose for news
Hurry their eyes along the type.
We hear the grumblers rumble
We know they're from Noo York,
They boast of trams and subways
Moving like a cork.
But we who love the town
Hang on grinningly
Knowing it is not so bad
If we just take it spinningly.

Have you ever noticed that stopped clock at Fourteenth and U Streets? It has always worried me. It belonged to a bank, and it is fittingly a big and dignified clock.

There were many big stopped clocks throughout the city and my savings went into hibernation, too, when the curfew rang on G Street. But I have a feeling of sentiment about the U Street bank, for I know its president. It was back in the days of quick profits on the market that he rescued me and my few hundred pesetas from the maw of Wall Street. I have always remembered the man, the bank and the clock. Biding by it one day occasioned this, my tribute:

The big bank clock
With the dignified tock
Never missed a beat the whole day long.
Never did it miss a ding, ding, dong.
But the funny-faced clock
With its tickety tock
Which stood right across at the barber shop
Was often late but it never did stop—
It struck any time with a jangling scund
With its funny little hands going round and round.
The hour was nine
But not a single sign
From the door where hung the big bank clock
As it pealed forth the hour for the entire block.
But the funny-faced clock
With its tickety tock
Faced the closed door with men in the street
With low, sullen voices and trampling of feet.
Men came and went
Some hurried and bent
And the rain wet the face of the dignified clock
And then it slowed down with a whispering—tock.
But the funny-faced clock
Gave a jumpety tock
To rouse its friend with a merry, merry bound.
It hurried its hands round and round—
It struck and it struck with a merry, merry sound—
But the big bank clock
With the dignified tock
Stood silent and worn in the wind and the rain
And the funny-faced clock
With a sad little tock
Could never be happy again.

Today And Tomorrow

The Last Ditch Defensive

AT THE RECENT "America First" rally in New York the other speaker on the platform with Col. Lindbergh was the Chairman of the Naval Affairs Committee of the Senate, Mr. David I. Walsh of Massachusetts. On the critical point in the whole argument as to whether America can afford to stand alone against the alliance of European and Asiatic powers the view expressed by Col. Lindbergh at the mass meeting must be compared with the recorded opinion of Senator Walsh to the Senate of the United States.

LIPPMANN

WHEREAS Col. Lindbergh is telling the country that it cannot be "invaded," this is what Senator Walsh said less than a year ago—on May 15, 1940—in the report of the Naval Affairs Committee:

"From all the evidence available it appears that the United States can be defeated and conquered without military conquest of continental United States. Without a navy capable of controlling the sea areas against an enemy, an effective blockade against our foreign commerce can be established and maintained at points thousands of miles from our coasts and well beyond aircraft range. Our outlying possessions will be captured and used against us as advance bases. There will be nothing to prevent the establishment of bases, by force, if necessary, in this hemisphere, from which, as well as from aircraft carriers, repeated bombing raids can be dispatched against our highly industrialized areas . . . With the loss of our outlying possessions, our foreign commerce, and subject to continual raids upon our coastal areas, our ultimate defeat is inevitable. It will be only a question of time, depending on how long our national will to further resist will hold out. Without the power to carry the fight to the enemy, there can be no alternative other than subjugation to his wishes."

Surely it is fair to ask the sincere and earnest sponsors of the America First Committee which of their two speakers, Col. Lindbergh or Senator Walsh, expresses their considered views on the dangers which confront America. What Senator Walsh had to say, when he was speaking officially and responsibly, is irreconcilable with what Col. Lindbergh is saying. For while the Colonel tells us we cannot be "invaded," the Senator has told us that we "can be defeated and conquered without military conquest of continental United States," that without command of the seas, which standing alone he knows we cannot hope to have, "our ultimate defeat is inevitable."

THE DEBATE between the isolationists and the interventionists is coming to the point where a decision will have to be taken, and it is necessary that we endeavor to define as clearly as possible the real issue on which sincere men and women still differ. The issue is whether America should stand alone and defend this hemisphere by repelling attacks on this side of the Atlantic or whether it should go to the support of Great Britain and, in alliance with the British navy and air force, repel the attack before it can be organized and launched. That is the real issue to be decided. It is not a choice between war and peace. It is, as Col. Lindbergh himself implied, a choice between fighting alone on this side of the Atlantic or with a powerful ally on the other side of the Atlantic. Col. Lindbergh prefers to fight alone over here—to defend the Western Hemisphere with "our battleships and submarines . . . fighting close to their home bases . . . bombing from the air and torpedoing at sea" and if this fails to repel the attack, then to fight "with the guns of our coast artillery and behind them the divisions of our Army."

The other view, which estimates the danger, as Senator Walsh described it when he made his report to the Senate, is that no nation in its senses will choose to defend itself alone and in the last ditch when it still has an excellent chance, by supporting a great ally, to defend itself at a distance and not in the last ditch. The Lindbergh view is that it is safer to fight at home in the last ditch; the other view is that if the war can be repelled before it comes to the last ditch, it would be suicidal folly to wait and let it come to the last ditch.

FOR IF WHAT the Colonel says is true, if in fact we can alone defend the Western Hemisphere off our own shores, then what additional risk do we run if we support Britain? Suppose the Colonel were right that the British navy plus the support of the American Navy would be insufficient to prevent Hitler from winning the battle of the Atlantic, suppose we try and we fail to sustain the British resistance. There will still be open to us that last ditch defense which the Colonel looks upon so optimistically.

On his own showing, which is that we cannot be invaded, even in our present unpreparedness, we should be in no greater peril if we tried and failed. As a matter of fact, we should be much better off if we try, and even if we fail we shall at the very least gain infinitely precious time to enlarge our Navy, to develop our production, to train our troops, to gain practical experience. We shall at the very least have subjected the enemy to an exhausting effort which will give us more time to prepare for the last ditch defense. We shall, at the very least, have made sure whatever happens in Britain, we shall have for our own last ditch defense the support of the British peoples everywhere else and of their allies. We shall, at the very least, have put ourselves in a position to make sure that there will be no revolutionary capitulation at our expense.

IN SHORT, if we try and fail, we shall still have all the advantages, if they are advantages, of standing alone in the last ditch. At the worst, we shall only be exactly where the Colonel wants us to be—alone in a world where Britain has fallen and the totalitarians are masters of Europe, of Asia, of Africa, and of the two oceans.

What those who disagree with the Colonel cannot understand, is why, even if he thinks we can stand alone in the last ditch, we should be advised to abandon the British and so make it certain that we shall stand alone in the last ditch. For surely it cannot be argued that standing alone in the last ditch against a world of enemies is a desirable situation, that it is anything but an appallingly dangerous one, which a sane people will, while it still can, do all in its power to avert.

Air Corps Compromise

A SENSIBLE compromise, under which the Air Corps will receive a fair measure of autonomy within the Army, is soon expected in the bitterest of the rather numerous controversies afflicting the service departments. Liberation of the air force from servitude to officers without air training has been a long time in coming. Since the days of Billy Mitchell, "independent air force" has been a fighting phrase at the War and Navy Departments. But it is the best sort of news that something is to be done in the matter at last.

The compromise is understood to be largely the work of three men, Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson, the extremely able new Assistant Secretary for Air Robert A. Lovett, and the chief of staff, Gen. George C. Marshall. A directive has already been drawn up in Gen. Marshall's office, generally granting the air force much more independence than it now has. The directive remains to be rounded out by approval of the details of the compromise, settling the necessary transfers of functions.

If the compromise goes through as now roughed out, the Air Corps will gain control of the two most essential functions—deciding what sort of planes and how many planes to buy, and recruiting and training its flying officers.

It may seem incredible that these functions have not been lodged in the Air Corps to date, but such was the peculiar condition of the military bureaucracy. The setup prevailing hitherto was simple though fantastic.

THE AIR CORPS was on the same footing, within the War Department as a fighting arm operating in another element, like the Navy, but as a mere adjunct to the ground forces. All decisions as to major policy were made in the general staff, where, until the recent appointment of Gen. "Hap" Arnold as a deputy chief of staff, air-trained officers were poorly represented. Questions of personnel went to G1, questions of operations and training to G3, questions of supply to G4, and so on. Furthermore, different though its problems were from those of the ground forces, the Air Corps was as dependent as the infantry or the cavalry on such bureaus of the Army as the office of the Adjutant General, the office of Ordnance, and the like.

The results were little less than appalling. In the first place, a collection of ground-trained officers sitting in judgment on Air Corps problems inevitably arrived at many stupid decisions. The present air program's overbalance of reconnaissance planes to be used with infantry is an example. In the second place, the growth of the Air Corps was just as inevitably stunted, and the morale of its best men was weakened by subjection to the ground-trained men. The corps was a junior branch, and the ground-trained officers were always in a majority in the Army. Thus, most energetic and self-respecting airmen came to be either grimly belligerent or angrily on the defensive.

Many airmen, and many informed laymen, will be dissatisfied with a compromise which does not grant the Air Corps outright independence. Its autonomy under the present settlement is far from complete. For instance, although it can decide on the best plane types, and the proportions of each plane type needed, it must still yield to the ordnance officers on matters of armament, and to the signal officers on questions of communication by radio or otherwise.

BUT THE decision of Secretary Stimson, assistant Secretary Lovett and Gen. Marshall seems, on the whole, to be the wisest possible. If the Air Corps had been granted outright independence, by the creation of a department of air or in some other way, then complete new medical, procurement, finance and accounting, transport and other services would have had to be built for it. In the present crisis, such a laborious and long-drawn out effort is out of the question. Thus Assistant Secretary Lovett is understood to have yielded the question of independence at the start, setting out originally to obtain for the Air Corps only a status equivalent to that of the Marine Corps within the Navy. Although he has certainly not gained every point, he has obtained enough to please and astonish the air officers.

That the settlement has been made so quietly, without plunging the rather touchy Army into internecine war, is vastly to the credit of all the parties concerned. It is also striking evidence of an extremely interesting fact, that Secretary Stimson, who was called old and incapable by many critics at the time of his appointment, is actually one of the most forceful and effective officials in the Administration.

India's War Effort

By T. A. Raman.

Her Men And Materials Resist The Axis

GEN. CHARLES DE GAULLE, the usually unemotional and taciturn leader of the Free French, sprang up beaming with delight when I stepped into his office in London a few weeks ago. "Your countrymen," he said, "are doing magnificent work in Africa. It is an honor, sir, to shake hands with a Hindu." All his report from the Middle East, he said, glowed with praise for the troops from India.

Britain's Middle Eastern chief, Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell, a man who weighs every word, has repeatedly cabled his praise, and when Keren, key-town of Eritrea, fell early this month, King George VI said in an enthusiastic message to the Viceroy that "this victory in the face of heavy odds has added new laurels to India's renown."

Hardly noticed by any but military experts, the success of India's troops in Eritrea is most significant. Eritrea was Italy's oldest and best treated colony and the native Eritreans were the hardiest and the most loyal of Italian colonial troops. Together with picked Carabinier, they fought every foot of the advance. The mountainous terrain rising often to 6,000 feet and the invariable superiority of enemy numbers and placement made the campaign the most arduous. But the troops from India—bearded Sikhs, gaunt Muslims from the Punjab and the frontier, and wiry Mahrattas—swept on to victory and have now made the speedy ousting of Italy from all East Africa a foregone conclusion.

BUT THERE is another profoundly important lesson in this success, the reason why De Gaulle was so delighted. None who knows their record in the last war could ever have doubted the gallantry of these troops, from India, but what has impressed military experts most is that they have proved themselves as brilliant in the swift, mechanized land-air warfare of today as in Flanders, France and Mesopotamia 25 years ago. And there are more, millions more, where they come from.

In a recent statement, Sir Sikander Hayat Khan, Premier of martial Punjab in Northwestern India, said that if a million more were required, he could raise them at a week's notice from his province alone. That is not rhetoric, but a statement of fact. India's recruiting offices are overful, and thousands are daily turned away for lack of equipment. There is no dearth of manpower for the defense of India, which is now directly and vitally involved in the battle of the Middle East.

How many troops from India actually participate now is a close secret, as is also their composition. India's peacetime army of 160,000 has been more than trebled since the outbreak of the war. Today there are more than half a million trained and entirely mechanized troops at home and abroad. A good proportion of these are in the Middle East, and the bulk of the troops operating in Eritrea and Somaliland are Indian. There are large numbers in the Abyssinian offensive and thousands in Egypt. Indian troops withdrawn from the East African offensives are now rushing to meet the new developing Nazi-Fascist intrusion into Egypt.

AT THE OTHER end of the Eastern Hemisphere, of which India is the central piece, Singapore stands ready for all comers. The land defense of the entire Malaya Peninsula has always been predominantly Indian. Shortly before the Thai-Indo-China clash and the Japanese "arbitration" therein, thousands of additional Indian troops were rushed to Singapore simultaneously with Australian reinforcements. These men, stationed at all likely points of attack, have now settled down in their posts, and Sir Brooke-Popham, Britain's Far Eastern commander, is certain that they will prove more than a match for any assailant.

The flow of fresh troops from India to the Far East has been going on steadily for months, and three weeks ago mounted to a crescendo when the largest reinforcement ever in the history of that part of the world landed at Singapore. The mood of these troops was typified by the remark of a formidable Sikh who jumped on to the quay and demanded, "Now, where is this enemy?" "Give us a camping ground and some water, if possible," said an Indian officer, "and we are ready for action straightaway."

OF SPECIAL importance is the fact that these regiments from India were entirely mechanized and came equipped with Bren carriers, guns and armored cars, mostly made or assembled in India. The vast country of India is still predominantly agricultural but she is far more industrialised than in 1918 and today ranks as a very considerable industrial power. Of the 40,000 components which are required to equip an adequate modern army, India produces about 22,000, many of these in large exportable surplus. Out of our factories, which are working months ahead of the most optimistic schedules drawn up last year, munitions and small arms pour out—enough to supply not only our troops but to help supply Australian, African, British and Free French as well. We make rifles, machine-guns, guns up to 4.5 calibre and heavy armour-plating, all in quantities in excess of the needs of our troops. American automobile assembling plants produce thousands of trucks which are rushed off by special trains to be converted into armored vehicles and Bren carriers. An aircraft factory, again under expert American control, is already going into production. India's steel plants include one of the largest in the world. Another, equally large, has just begun production, but even now we meet all our civilian and defense needs and export pig-iron and light steel to Africa and Britain herself.

Out of her vast raw-product resources, India exports to Britain and to all the Eastern Hemisphere vast quantities of coal, shellac, hides, mica, manganese, saltpeter, oil-seeds, silk, hemp, coir, rubber and tea. Her factories work overtime and she has virtually taken over the whole eastern market for Lancashire cotton goods, supplying textiles, tentage, ready-made uniforms, shirts and blankets. The armies of the Middle East march mostly on Indian-made boots and any safety that monuments have in Britain or Africa is derived from the sandbags of which India has already supplied a billion and a half. For all these exports India recognizes but one limit—the shipping space available.

ALL THIS magnificent effort has gone on and will multiply despite the political argument between the government and nationalist India. Every responsible leader makes it clear that he will do nothing to hinder the country's war-effort against the Nazis. It is an axiom, too, among all of us, that the country's frontiers lie at Suez in the west and Singapore in the east, and India, glittering prize of many adventurers and aggressors, recognizes that she is now in the forefront of battle.

If she has not more men in the battle, it is not because stout hearts and strong hands and agile brains are lacking in her 400,000,000 population, but because she has not all the means for adequately equipping them. If the prodigy of her present production effort is not multiplied, it is because she lacks the industrial means for doing more. With Britain, and prompted not alone by mere sympathy for the British, but also out of her own dire peril, India echoes Mr. Churchill's appeal, "Give us the tools and we will finish the job."

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Olympus Interlude

'Twas dawn on Mount Olympus—
The gods were tranquil there
Until sounds strange and frightful
Disturbed the quiet air.

At first they moved but slightly
And hardly ceased to snore;
Then thought, as in a nightmare,
"Man's acting up once more."

The sound of mortal voices,
The crash of shot and shell
Roared through the highest mountain
And broke the ancient spell.

They heard the sound of voices,
Triumphant, full of mirth:
"By Gott, we take Olympus!
Und now we own de earth."

Now mightily Zeus raises
Himself and looks about;
He sees a pair of Fritzies—
Up there beyond a doubt!

The startled Zeus then listens:
"Sieg heil! Segi heil!" he hears,
And vows "This is the pay-off!"
And plugs up both his ears.

Apollo, quite dumbfounded,
Recoils from such a fate;
"This can't be true," he mutters;
"It's sumpin that I ate!"

Now Ajax sees the Heinies
And hears 'em singing there;
His last words as recorded
Are these: "Quick! Gimme air!"

Now Hermes senses something,
Then opens both eyes wide;
"This does it!" cries he, sliding
Right down the mountainside.

The swastika is planted . . .
Each great god sheds a tear
And asks as in a stupor,
"What ho! What goes on here?"

The Nazis cry "Heil Hitler!"
With vigor, pep and vim,
And Zeus, puzzled, mutters,
"Who ever heard of him?"

Then from sagacious Homer
There comes this last wise crack
"Come, Gods, let's go before we Are charged with an attack!"

The Contract

("U. S. Dallies, but Hitler Won't Wait, Says Speaker."—headline.)

Hitler won't wait . . . we will,
Sounding the cry "Me first!"
Spiking the guns by free will,
Doing our very worst.

Hitler won't halt . . . but we will,
Spreading the strikes each day;
Liberty fears that she will Soon be the pickets' prey.

Hitler won't pause . . . but we do,
Tossing the monkey wrench,
Risking our country's future,
Hampering lathe and bench.

Hitler is swift . . . but we're not,
We think of coin and ease;
Wounded may cry; we hear not . . .
When will our nonsense cease?

"Arsenic and Old Lace" is to this column's notion just about the funniest play of the year, and it establishes beyond all doubt that there really is a Boris Karloff.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

The Town Of Tombstone, Ariz.

FOR YEARS and years the local rooms of newspapers in the Middle West and New York were visited from time to time by a plaintive bum who lived meagerly on his one achievement in life—a crime for which he undoubtedly should have been hanged at the time. Many reporters, in their travels, wrote little attempts at human interest about Pat Crowe, "the man who kidnaped the Cudahy Kid," for he had been notorious for a brief time in his youth and, as age piled up, fed his vanity on clippings and his body on small mooches. Toil was out of his line, and he made a career, such as it was, out of one clumsy crime which he would recount in detail with the pride of a military hero relating the exploit that had won him a medal of honor.

PAT CROWE, in his moldy years, cadging lines of publicity, boasting of a miserable feat of outlawry in the sanctimonious tone of a professional brand from the burning, was the town of Tombstone in emaciated flesh and shabby clothes, for Tombstone, too, flaunts an ancient record of wickedness and ekes out a living now from tourists passing through by exploiting the badness of men who were bold beyond question, and some of them brave, but, with few exceptions, criminals of the most ignorant and smelly kind. The town survives only because the main highway goes through, and probably would have perished utterly if, like some of its contemporary camps, it has been by-passed.

The mines are unworkable, so Tombstone works the tailings of an evil reputation and collects dividends from old vices that were not cured but starved out. A degree of reform did come when the criminals became a dangerous menace, but real purity set in only with sterility—when the wealth expired.

Today Tombstone, under the motto "The Town Too Tough to Die," is a crumbling string-town on a mountain highway, its adobe shells a bush-league imitation of Pompeii, its weekly paper a listless jumble of reminiscence from the old files, current jottings, standard ads and patent insides. Boot Hill Cemetery is a deliberately shabby collection of mounds and markers littered with broken bottles, gum wrappers and other tourist trash, and maintained so as an affectation, notwithstanding the fact that not all who slumber there were bad.

UP TO A CERTAIN point in local history the honorable dead were put down in the same patch with the murderer and thief, and nowadays the respectables who rest in Boot Hill do duty with their criminal contemporaries to ballyhoo an attraction which exists mainly in the sentimental and morbid imagination of the tourist. There is a more select community of the dead a couple of miles away.

Tombstone now shuns the vices which, nevertheless, continue to pay a little revenue, and the present community, though morally prim, has achieved an interesting frame of mind wherein the wages of sin are honest coin. Gaudy ladies, who vanished long ago, still contributed of their earnings, in a manner of speaking, as in the years when they were licensed for the trade. The cattle thief and the stagecoach robber make a posthumous contribution to the support of a community which would react like New Canaan, Conn., to a common fist fight on Main Street.

There are now three saloons in town, two patronized almost exclusively by Mexicans and the third by Nordics. But recently, when a party of tourists emerged from this one pretending to be plastered on a round of beer and yelling "Yippee!" the bartician rushed out in scandalized alarm, complaining such disorder was likely to give his place an evil name. It lives on its bad name, for the saloon is the veritable Crystal Palace bar of famous memory, but that seems to be no excuse for ill-behaved strangers to take liberties. The high school stands where the brothels were, but it would be most unwise of a stranger to arch his neck at any Tombstone lady now, for respectability is rife, although, of course, the pay dirt of reminiscence concerning old immorality is still being mined.

THE OLD FILES of the Epitaph are vastly more lively than the volumes of respectable years. A random turn brings up a dispatch from San Francisco that Lily Langtry, who had played in the Bird Cage Theater in Tombstone on her way West, was dwelling there in a casual relationship with Freddie Gebhard. C. F. Richards, of San Francisco, advertised, at $5 a bottle, a positive cure for a malady which appears to have been an occupational disease of the cowboy and prospector, in any stage of advancement.

Tombstone is a paradox—a clean, pure, quiet American community which frowns on wickedness, but sells it by the peek in glimpses of the past.

Defense Savings Drive Opens, Bonds Go On Sale Thursday

By the Associated Press

Five thousand separate radio announcements yesterday inaugurated the most intensive selling campaign in the peacetime history of the Nation, as the Treasury began its dime-to-thousands defense savings drive.

It is expected to rival and perhaps surpass the now historic Liberty bond campaigns of World War days.

The new securities, of which the Treasury hopes to sell at least $3,000,000,000 in the next 18 months, go on sale Thursday morning in 16,000 postoffices and several thousand banks. Later department stores and thousands of other places may handle them.

The new securities, planned to help meet part of the huge preparedness bill, were tailored purposely to fit the purse of every American. They include 10-cent stamps for children, baby bonds for the average man, and larger bonds, up to $10,000 denominations, for wealthier persons, trust funds and businesses.

Every radio station in the Nation was expected to have at least five one-minute announcements on the campaign starting yesterday. Time has been contributed by the stations and advertisers. Newspaper and magazine campaigns also are in the making, and shorts for the movie screen are being rushed.

President Roosevelt, Secretary Morgenthau and Postmaster General Walker will give the defense savings drive an official sendoff in a special radio program tomorrow night. The President will lay his money down to buy the first bond.

Officials indicated no effort would be made to get people to put large amounts in defense savings at once. Instead, the plan is to get the public to purchase smaller amounts on weekly or monthly plans, so that over a period of time they will buy more than if they splurged immediately.

'D. C. Day' Yields Bill for Canteen At Glenn Dale

As far as the District was concerned the net result of nearly two hours of "District Day" debate in the House esterday was adoption of one bill.

The bill would provide for "establishment of a comissary or canteen" at the Glenn Dale (Md.) sanatarium. It is a bill of a little more than 100 words. The House considered it for about two minutes before approving the measure by unanimous consent.

Most of "District Day" was consumed in debate over the blackout bill which was defeated.

Cooperation of Cuba and U. S. Pledged at Party for Editor

By the Associated Press

Pledges for "critical but friendly" cooperation between Cuba and the United States were exchanged before a small group of officials and editors here yesterday between George H. Messersmith, United States Ambassador to Cuba, and Dr. Raul Maestri, assistant director of Diario de la Marina of Havanna.

The Cuban editor was guest of Ambassador Messersmith and the State Department Division of Cultural Affairs at a luncheon at the Cosmos Club.

Correspondent Here

Messersmith introduced him as an outstanding Cuban editor of a newspaper which in "editorial dignity, mechanical equipment, and business management" is on a par with any of the better newspapers of this country. The Ambassador also recalled that Diario de la Marina is one of the two oldest newspapers in this hemisphere and the only one that currently issues a rotogravure section every day it is published.

In citing the achievements of Diario de la Marina, Ambassador Messersmith recalled that Dr. Maestri had served in Washington as a correspondent for his paper. He revealed that the Cuban journalist had been selected by the State Department as the person to be invited to come here for study under the "travel grant" system of collaboration with the other Americas because of his demonstrable capacity as a reporter and understanding of the problems besetting the world today.

Fought Side by Side

Dr. Maestri answered Ambassador Messersmith's request that he give this country the benefit of his friendly and constructive criticism by saying he was "proud of the opportunity" to do so. Dr. Maestri said he would set about his activities here with a sincere determination to give Cubans an honest report concerning the United States and its preparations for its share of the responsibility of hemisphere defense.

In doing so the eminent Cuban journalist said he could not forget that Cubans and Americans have shed common blood on the battlefield, nor that in Cuba's 40 years of history as an independent republic fraternal relationships with the United States have become increasingly better.

Other guests at the luncheon were Dr. Leo S. Rowe, director general of the Pan American Union; Benjamin M. McKelway, managing editor of the Evening Star; Alexander F. Jones, managing editor of The Washington Post; Edward G. Trueblood and several other officers of the State Department Division of Cultural Relations, and Philip Bonsal, acting director of the department division of the American republics.

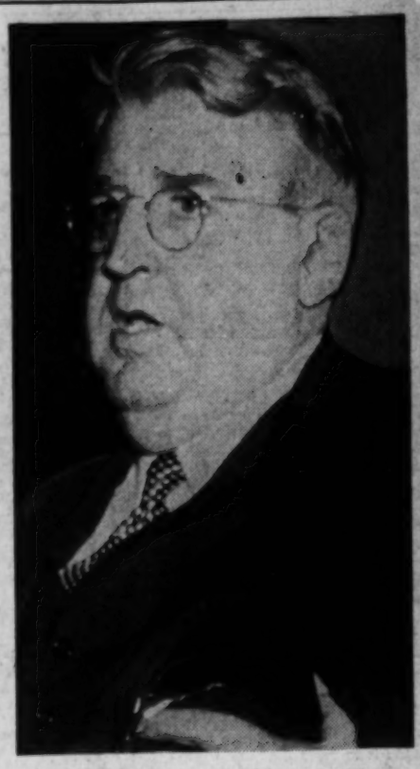
Coal Shutdown Probe Precedes Operators' Agreement

1. REPORTING TO PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT the failure of the Mediation Board to reach any agreement in the soft-coal dispute, which has kept idle the eight-State Appalachian section, was the job of William H. Davis, vice chairman of the board. Here, Davis, brief case in hand, leaves the White House. Meanwhile . . .

2. THERE WAS STANDING ROOM ONLY when John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers Union, took the witness stand at the Senate investigating committee hearing to give his version of the coal wage dispute. The momentous meeting yesterday preceded the announcement by the White House last night that Southern mine operators had agreed to the President's proposal for resumption of work, terminating the defense-crippling soft-coal shutdown



3. CHARLES O'NEILL, of New York, spokesman for Northern operators, told the committee that the Southerners had "walked out" of wage negotiations and had declined to accept earlier back-to-work proposals of the President and the Mediation Board

6. EMPTY COAL CARS in Cleveland seemed to bear out McGrady's statement. Thousands of the cars are now in yards ready for the word that will send them back to mines. Some cars in Cleveland yards carry coal to Great Lakes docks, transfer their loads for iron ore

Text of McGrady's Message To Senate Committee:

Mr. Chairman:

I believe it would be a moderate statement to say that if the present stoppage in the soft coal mines continues the entire national defense effort will be in grave jeopardy. The situation is now crucial.

We have now passed the calendar point where settlement of this strike could have averted damage to the defense program. The all-important question today is one of limiting the damage as much as possible, and as quickly as possible, before the entire industrial preparedness drive is completely paralyzed.

I must emphasize that in most cases a period of about a week after the resumption of coal mining will be required for the replacement of depleted coal stocks. Furthermore, in the case of the steel industry at least an additional week will be required to get back into production those blast furnaces which have been closed down as a result of this strike.

The effect of this strike of 350,000 to 400,000 miners, which began on April 2, 1941, and is now in its twenty-seventh day, already has been felt drastically throughout that portion of American industry meeting the vital needs of this country in the current emergency. With production of bituminous coal virtually at a standstill, the reserves of many defense manufacturers and suppliers have reached the exhaustion point. Curtailment of production is being reported generally and shutdowns are already becoming widespread.

The War Department has just completed a thorough survey of the effect of the soft coal strike on War Department procurement.

Steel is unquestionably the industry most seriously affected. Reports of the 13 ordnance districts, as of April 26, indicate that not less than 24 blast furnaces have now been banked, and that at least 10 more will be closed down by May 1. These figures take no account of the large number of furnaces which are operating at reduced capacity in order to prolong coke supplies as long as possible. The average blast furnace produces between 5,000 and 6,000 tons of pig-iron per week. Steel ingot production is already more than 15 per cent off, and this percentage will be doubled by May 5. It is estimated that steel production has already been cut at a rate of more than a million tons a month; by May 5 it is expected that it will be cut more than 2,500,000 tons, and so on progressively.

Although the power situation is somewhat better, at least 15 major utilities will face serious shortages within two or three weeks. It seems probable, from the data on hand, that facilities generating their own power are in even worse straits.

Other industries are already feeling serious effects, not only because of depletion of their own coal and coke supplies, but because of delays in receipt of steel on order. One example is the Harley-Davidson Motor Co., a principal source of supply of the fast motorcycles employed by motorized troops. It has reported that production will be delayed by failure to receive seamless steel tubing on order with the Pittsburgh Steel Co. The number of companies so affected, while still relatively small, will, of course, increase very rapidly during the coming week. The situation is particularly critical where special alloy steels are concerned, since the inadequacy of existing facilities for the production of such steels has forced most manufacturers to proceed on a hand-to-mouth basis where they are concerned.

Another vital industry which is at present seriously affected is ammonia, an essential element of TNT and other high explosives. At least three major units in this industry have reported that drastic curtailment of production is imminent. Most important of these is the Hopewell, Va., plant of the Solvay Process Co., largest of its kind in the world.

The Ordnance Department reports that two plants of the du Pont company, one at Seneca, Ill., which produces ammonia nitrate, and another at Barksdale, Wis., which produces TNT, have only two weeks' coal supply on hand.

Details of the status of the defense industries most seriously affected follow:

Steel

In the Cincinnati district, the Continental Steel Co., Kokomo, Ind., will be forced to close down altogether unless additional coal and coke supplies are received by May 3. A typical example of the dependence of all defense industries upon steel, and consequently upon coal, can be seen in some of the contracts held by this concern.

It supplies approximately 400 tons of sheet metal per week to the Army's Frankfort Arsenal, 800 tons to Noblitt Sparks Industries, Inc., Columbus, Ind., holding prime contracts, and 600 tons per week to the Swanegan Chemical Co., Ltd., an important Canadian defense producer.

In the Chicago district, Carnegie-Lllinois, largest single unit in the steel industry, has banked 7 out of 23 blast furnaces at the Gary and South Chicago plants. Even on this reduced operating basis, the company has less than three week's supply.

The prospect of further curtailment is indicated as imminent by the fact that the company has banked 210 of its 280 coke ovens at Joliet.

Inland Steel, in this district, anticipates a reduction of operations by May 10. Pickens-Mather Co., a subsidiary of Interlake Iron, reports that it may be necessary to shut down one or both of the furnaces at its Chicago plant shortly after May 1.

In the Cleveland district, the Republic Steel Corporation has cut pig iron production in its Cleveland and Youngstown plants approximately 30 per cent. The corporation closed down Bessemer operations four days ago. The Otis Steel Co., Cleveland, will be forced to shut down production entirely by May 3, although it may be able to avert a complete shutdown by curtailing production at once.

The National Tube Co., Lorain, Ohio, closed down one furnace on April 26. Struthers Iron & Steel Co., Youngstown, is operating at 50 per cent of capacity, and reports that a complete stoppage is imminent. Youngstown Sheet & Tube will close down two of seven furnaces in Youngstown on May 1, with more to follow shortly; the corporation's six Chicago furnaces will have to be banked if coke is not secured by May 15.

The American Steel & Wire Co. has cut production of its furnaces to 50 per cent of capacity.

In the Pittsburgh district, the United States Steel Co. has already closed five large blast furnaces and will be compelled to close others this week. Mackintosh - Hemphill has closed down three blast furnaces, cutting production 75 per cent, and Pittsburgh Steel Co. has closed one furnace, cutting production 50 per cent. The Oliver Iron & Steel Co. will be forced to suspend production entirely on May 8.

The Allegheny Ludlum Steel Co., largest producer of special steels, is at present rationing its coal supply; a 30 per cent cut in production will be necessitated unless additional supplies are procured by May 5. supplies are renewed by May 5.

Weirton Steel, one of the larger units in "Little Steel," will be forced to cut production 25 per cent unless coke

In the Philadelphia district, the Bethlehem Steel Co. has cut production 20 per cent, and estimates that even at this reduced rate supplies are sufficient only for about three weeks.

The Allen Wood Iron & Steel Co. has shut down its main blast furnace, cutting production about 600 tons per day. The company estimates that it has about two weeks' supply, operating at somewhat less than half capacity.

The E. & G. Brooke Iron Works, which already has cut production 25 per cent, has only about five days' coal left.

In the Rochester district, the Donner-Hanna Co. (Buffalo) will cut its coke production in half today. This will necessitate the closing of one furnace at the Republic Steel Co. and two at the Hanna Steel Co. by Wednesday at the latest.

In the Detroit district, the Great Lakes Steel Co. has only about two weeks' supply of coke left.

In the South, the principal effect has been felt not by the steel industry so much as by the producers of coke. One major producer of foundry coke has reduced production by one-third due to a scarcity of coal. This will adversely affect foundries producing castings for defense projects.

Power

The New York State Electric & Gas Co., serving most of south central New York, has only about two weeks' supply of coal left. This means in effect about one week's supply, since about a week is required to obtain new supplies in this region.

The Factory Power Co., Cincinnati, supplying a group of key machine tool plants, has about two weeks' coal supply on hand.

The New England Power Co., serving a large industrial area north of Boston, has less than three weeks' supply on hand. In this area at least ten days will be required to secure additional supplies after mining is resumed.

Public Service of Indiana, serving approximately 55 counties in southern and central Indiana, and having some customers in the northern part of the State, also faces a serious shortage. Some $400,000,000 worth of War Department contracts have been let in Indiana.

The Brooklyn Union Gas Co., supplying a number of vital defense plants in New York City has only about three weeks' coal supply.

Elsewhere, however, utilities appear to have 30 days' supply or better.

Transportation

From the Chicago district, it is reported that the Southern Railroad has 10 days' supply; the Chicago & Eastern Illinois, two weeks'; and New York Central, three weeks'; the Burlington, three weeks'; and the Atchison, Topeka & Sante Fe, 17 days.

In the Philadelphia district, it is estimated that the railroads there have no more than two weeks' coal supply.

General Effects

The pinch is gradually being felt in other industries too. The Kelsey-Hayes Wheel Co. in the Detroit Ordnance District has only 10 days' supply of coal and may have to curtail production upon important defense subcontracts for wheels, electric brake assemblies, hand brake assemblies, and hub and drum assemblies for gun carriages.

Railroads, City Utilities Feel Pinch of Low Supply

A number of textile manufacturers report that curtailment of production and even shutdowns will be necessitated unless additional coal supplies are secured within the next week. Among these are the Peerless Woolen Mills, Rossville, Ga., holding large Quartermaster contracts for suiting and overcoating, and the Renfrew Bleacheries, Travelers Rest, S. C., holding contracts for more than 4,000,000 yards of various types of cotton cloth.

Several machine tool manufacturers, especially in the New England area, report serious coal shortages. Among these are the Hendley Machine Co., Torrington, Conn.; the Bullard Co., Bridgeport, Conn., the New Britain Gridley Machine Co., New Britain, Conn., and the Wright Machine Co., Worcester, Mass.

The situation is particularly acute for these companies since they fear that shutdowns will cause skilled labor to transfer to other industries not dependent upon coal for continued operations.

Gentlemen, I have given you the facts of the situation, facts which are giving the War Department serious concern because they forebode a catastrophic effect upon the industrial mobilization effort.

This may have seemed like a recitation of cold, dry statistics to you. But, gentlemen, you must remember as we remember at all times that the industries which I have mentioned as being affected by the coal strike are at the heart and the core of our rearmament program. Anything that cripples the productivity of these industries cripples our national defenses.

Decorator's Fee Will Prove Wise Expenditure

Consult One Before Making Any Major Changes in House

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

FANTASIES of the decorators are one thing . . . the everyday problems of home furnishings are another. But don't call the decorators impractical just because they occasionally go in for dramatic news-making ideas . . . such conversation pieces advertise them, get their work talked about. Wasn't it Mary Garden who made that wise remark, "Say anything you like about me—but talk about me."

Spectacular decorating binges don't mean that the decorators can't cope with simple problems—to think that would be like saying that a singer could not do a scale just because she was able to trill a brilliant colorature cadenza.

Actually, nobody is so down-to-earth practical as a good decorator. She knows exactly what kind of wear to expect from every fabric, rug, furniture finish, color. She knows just how to get the most out of every decoration dollar. Then, if she splurges, she does it with her eyes open . . . she knows that ignorance, accidents, mistakes impulses are pretty expensive guides in planning and shopping for home furnishings.

A Wise Economy

So it is that homemakers will do well to consult a qualified decorator before making major changes in the house. The fee charged probably will prove a wise economy because of the money that will be saved in the long run in wiser purchases. Or—have this service free by consulting the decorators in your favorite department store—most large stores maintain this service as a courtesy in helping their customers. Here are typical reader problems that involve decorating points we thought of general interest:

Mrs. H. G. writes: "We need a place to sit in our bedroom, yet there doesn't seem to be room for a chaise lounge or a big arm chair. The room is all in white with a light green rug, and flowered chintz on a white ground.

The answer: Why not have a small, armless love seat to go at the foot of the bed or in front of the window? Have it slip-covered in the flowered chintz.

Sun Porch Curtains

Mrs. A. B. writes: I have a large sun porch just completed and I would like to put up curtains or draperies. What would you suggest? The sun pours in all day. I want something sunfast and washable.

Answer: We'd have draw curtains—made with rings to swish open or closed. A coarse textural weave would be the best thing, for that would eliminate the need for shades and enable you to have just one curtain instead of a glass curtain and drapery. White or natural would probably be the most practical color here—or yellow, if you want to dramatize the sunny character of the room. Blues and greens are risky where there's so much sun. Be sure to have simple skirt pleats at the top for washing—fancy pinch pleats require dry cleaning.

Curtains on North Side of House Wear Longer

Curtains hung on the north side of the house wear longer than those hung at east, south or west windows. Science has proved that the destructive action of the sun's rays is so great that curtains become weakened in the lower areas much faster than they do at the top, where they are somewhat protected from the sun by lowered shades.

That's one reason why home managers using the tailored type of curtain, select those which have sized hems at top and bottom. This simple expedient enables them to reverse the top and bottom so that both ends of the curtains are eventually exposed to direct sunlight.

According to the American Institute of Laundering, here are some of the things home managers should watch for when buying curtains.

Poor color fastness of printed color designs.

Excess shrinkage in some rayon marquisettes. Dotted marquisettes, in pussy willow, pin and cushion type dots, should be noted to make sure the fabric is woven so these dots remain securely held in place and aren't pushed out of line by the warp threads sliding over the loose filling threads.

Extremely weak bridal veil lace, and a type of chenille curtains that lose their tufts during washing offer problems to both home manager and professional laundries alike.

Poised Manner Wins Beaux

JUST starting to date and party—and not starting very well, you can see. Her fellow guests smile at her lack of manners, the way she tags after her beau when he gets his car at the end of the dance.

If you do nothing about learning etiquette, those amused whispers follow you around, put such a damper on your social life. "Invite Dorothy? No! She's just not used to going out!"

But if you do learn a few things all that changes. At the end of your next party, wait at the entrance for your beau to drive around for you. When dancing and a man cuts in on you don't be deaf and dumb, but murmur to the departing swain, "That was nice"—and to the new partner, "I'm glad to see you!" You won't applaud or say "Thank you" after a dance, for the boys do that, but say "I enjoyed it, too."

The word soon gets around that you're a smooth-mannered, charming girl. You're asked on dinner dates, movie dates, every kind.

And you keep up the good work letting the boys pull out your chair at table, open doors—instead of kiddishly doing that for yourself.

Your social life brightens up when you have our 40-page booklet, "ETIQUETTE FOR THE TEENS." Tells the correct thing at dances, movies, hotels; when motoring, dating, visiting, entertaining, dining. Explains introductions, what to do about the petting problems.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "ETIQUETTE FOR THE TEENS," to the New York Office of The Washington Post Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Salads Good For Appeasing The Appetite

By Ida Jean Kain

It's the serving that satitates that puts on the pounds. You can sense that shortly after a full meal when your belt draws too snug for comfort and you let it out a notch, then another. Then you wish you hadn't taken that fifth spare rib and extra slice of bread.

Your main trouble is the habit of overeating. It keeps you from knowing when you have had enough until you have had too much. To break it, make a staunch practice of leaving the table while you still feel as if you could eat a little more. If in doubt as to whether it's actual hunger or just that "old debbil" appetite, how about some spinach or a little more green salad?

Probably the delectable sugars and starches are all that take your fancy and it's up to you to resist them. When you have been away from the table for ten minutes, you'll find you no longer crave food of any kind. That plan is perfectly practical.

Start With Bullion

There's no reason why you should let your appetite get the better of you. You can have an abundance of food low in calories. Suppose you start your meal with a cup of piping hot bullion—that counts only twenty-five calories, and doesn't it taste good? And instead of having crackers with it, munch on celery.

The second course can be hearty, provided you trim off the fat. You'll be one up on the calories if you cut off the fat from your portion of the meat before it reaches the table. When one vegetable is high in starch, the other should be the green leafy kind. Only when butter for the vegetables is specified should it be added. Having a couple of pats of butter on your bread and butter plate is like having a bowl of salted peanuts in front of you. The next time you reach for just a speck, it's all gone. Limit yourself to one pat, one-fourth inch thick, per meal.

There's nothing wrong with bread and potatoes but it's a good reducer's rule to have one or the other, not both at the same meal. Or, if you like a good dessert better than all the rest of the meal, occasionally skip the bread and potatoes altogether and have your dessert.

Salads Fill You Up

Salads are bulky and make you feel full and that is part of the normal satisfaction of hunger. But the French Dressing and mayonnaise pile on calories. You can have Reducer's French Dressing made with mineral oil and boiled dressing made with skim milk.

Dieting isn't so bad when you plan your menus to include something hot, a protein dish that stays by you, and bulky foods to give a false sense of satisfaction. That makes a good meal—and for only 500 to 600 calories.

Mary Haworth's Mail

One Grows Into Love and Remains in Love Through Practicing the Art of Considerate Behavior Toward Another, Says Reader, Quoting Psychologist

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I was very much interested in the problem of the young wife—discussed in your column of April 16—who is "haunted by a constant feeling of utter loneliness," despite the fact that she is devotedly loved by a charming and prosperous husband, whose love she returns. I am particularly impressed by the sharp contrast between your viewpoint and those, on the same subject, expressed by "L. E. K.," which were published April 22.

I find the latter's views rather inconsistent—in that she begins by stating that spiritual and mental melancholy invariably have a physical basis, and concludes by implying that reliance upon "that spiritual power which we call God," is indispensable in effecting any sort of healing. Also, it seems to me she is overlooking the relationship of cause-and-effect, in bluntly declaring that the young wife must first conquer her neurasthenia, before considering your recommendation to have (or adopt) children.

An eminent psychologist, in addressing a group of young people on, "Preparation for Marriage," remarked that one is not born "in love" with another, but becomes in love, through practise of the art of loving; and remains in love only by consistently practicing that art in relation to the partner. Love of one's children comes into being similarly, and this is as true of women who adopt children as it is of those who bear their own.

Dr. Ira S. Wile, of New York's Mount Sinai Hospital, speaking before the District Medical Society, states that "the doctor himself is medicine;" and that a conference with a physician wise in the nature of mankind may be better treatment for the average ailing individual than "a teaspoonful of bitter stuff, taken three times daily." The doctor, he says, has become too conscious of instruments and drugs. He goes on to say there are emotional or mental factors involved in such ailments as gastric ulcers, asthma, heart trouble, arthritis, etc., etc., just as there are in the candidly neurotic afflictions of the psychotic personality.

He remarks that Christian Science, for example, has a far greater scientific justification than is generally realized, and that mental healing is an undeniable actuality. Researchers have discovered, he says, that 75 per cent of the clientele of the general practitioner require psychiatric or personality treatment; and he holds that the sucessful physician must use mental manipulation, suggestion and analysis to rid patients of susceptibility to panic, tendency to fear, feelings of insecurity, lack of self confidence, etc.

"L. E. K." mentions a woman of her acquaintance (long married, with children and grandchildren), who is finding great joy in creating things with her hands. She says what a pity it is that more of us don't realize that neither husband nor children can fully satisfy the soul of a really worthwhile woman—who must always be finding new creative outlets for her spirit, and new things to do with her hands. I agree with her that experience with the superficials as well as with the fundamentals is necessary to a well-rounded life. But I also say that unless the fundamental nature is fulfilled, no amount of the superficial will bring surcease from the tortured sense of unfulfillment. Sincerely yours,

INTERESTED BYSTANDER.

Says Sweet Disposition Is Rare Among Wives

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Dr. Alexis Carrel has written a book called, "Man The Unknown." Now, I think someone should write a book called, "Woman, The Known." No one has more respect for womankind than I, but the very thing which many of them appear to long for—namely, love,—they most successfully murder when they once possess it. A man of my acquaintance says he has known very few men who didn't regret their marriage, within the year after making it.

Among all the virtues that woman may possess, a sweet disposition is the rarest, the most to be desired. Yet how many wives possess that virtue? A vile disposition, which spews out its venom on any provocation, will effectually blast to atoms the grandest love of which any human being was ever capable. And how many wives realize this? Alas, too few. Why, if the majority of wives I know were to treat their friends as they treat their husband (in carpet-slipper privacy), they would be friendless in pretty short order.

Yet married life can be heaven-on-earth, for those who enter the relationship determined to be lovers and friends until death doth them part—and willing to go all the way (not just half; or more than half) to keep the peace, by giving the sunny smile and the soft answer that turneth away wrath, when trouble comes knocking at the door. Sincerely,

H. V. H.

Man Finds 'Good Stuff' In Book Cited Here

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I recently read Dr. W. Beran Wolfe's, "How to be Happy Though Human," on the strength of your recommendation to another correspondent, some weeks back. There is certainly a lot of good stuff in that book—facts of life concerning which no one can afford to be ignorant. And yet countless thousands are! I know a great many supposedly "successful" business and professional men who are, in my opinion, really miserable failures: in that they have never learned the fundamentals of the art of living, although liberally "educated" in the conventional sense.

This is a fine book you have recommended—and more people should read it. You might, for instance, have prescribed it for your 30-year-old neurasthenic woman (see column of April 23), who is increasingly dominated by a lifelong fear of people. Anyhow, I am indebted to you for having brought it to my attention. Sincerely yours,

JOHN D. G.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Cream Scones for Serve-Yourself Buffet Supper

THE WOMAN who goes to business and who also enjoys entertaining friends in her own home often requests menu suggestions and recipes. This is especially true if she has no cook or maid and must plan well in advance to make everything move smoothly.

Elinor Lee, home economist for Station WJSV, Columbia Broadcasting System, recently gave a buffet supper whose menu the busy woman would find helpful.

Crab Meat Casserole, spiced cherries and cream scones made an interesting and satisfying main course, yet one which left just enough appetite for the full enjoyment of the dessert—Regal Caramel Cake and Lemon Ice.

Here is Elinor Lee's menu, also the recipe for Cream Scones:

Buffet Supper

Crab Meat en Casserole
Cream Scones Spiced Red Cherries
Regal Caramel Cake Lemon Ice
Salted Nuts Coffee

The Cream Scones were one of the hits of the menu with all the guests. The recipe for making them is as follows:

Cream Scones—Sift cake flour once, measure to 2 cups, add 2 teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt and 2 teaspoons sugar, and sift again. Cut in 4 tablespoons butter or other shortening; add 1 egg and 1 egg yolk that have been well beaten, all at once and stir carefully until all flour is dampened. Then stir vigorously until mixture forms a soft dough and follows spoon around bowl. Turn out immediately on slightly floured board and knead for 30 seconds. Brush tops lightly with egg white, and sprinkle with sugar. Bake in hot oven, 450 degrees, 12 to 15 minutes. Makes 12.

You suddenly discover that you haven't a thing to wear and your budget is much too slim to permit your going out and buying everything you would like or can use. The basic costume is the perfect solution to your clothes problem and it is one which has endless possibilities for varied effects.

According to Hilda Burke, lovely blonde Metropolitan Opera star and recognized as one of opera's best-dressed luminaries, one will cut black or navy blue dress with a flattering silhouette—not too extreme in either shoulders or waistline—can be the basis of an apparently extensive wardrobe. Transform it into a gala occasion costume by adding flowers and carrying out the floral note in your gay pompadour bonnet. Substitute massive jewelry accents for occasions when you feel like a femme fatale. Crisp white lingerie in the shape of demure wide collar and dainty cuffs is easy to add and simpler to take care of.

Further transformations can be achieved by adding print jackets or solid color jackets in brilliant green or red, or the softer pastels, according to the lovely diva who has found that the basic dress is the perfect answer to the problem of traveling and packing while on concert tours.

If your basic dress has smooth white buttons on it and you suddenly discover that your lingerie accessories are in the laundry, you will probably be both intrigued and amused by Miss Burke's newest discovery—adding nail-polish in any shade from the most delicate of pinks to the deepest of reds, which will transform your buttons into striking color notes. Nail-polish remover will restore the buttons to their original state.

Mrs. Wessel to Sail For Sweden May 9

By Hope Ridings Miller

ONE OF OUR TOWN'S most attractive diplomatic hostesses will bow out of the Washington picture—temporarily, at least—when Mme. Karl Wessel, wife of the Swedish Military Attache, sails for her homeland May 9. Although she and her husband have been in this country only a few months, they have a host of friends here who will be looking forward to Mme. Wessel's return sometime in September. Capt. Wessel, meanwhile, will stay on in Washington.

HOPE RIDINGS MILLER

"I'm going over to get my children," Mme. Wessel told me yesterday. Her 3-year-old daughter is in Stockholm with relatives. Her 14-year-old son is in a boarding school in Sweden. And ever since she arrived, she has been hoping they could join here here. Finally, when arrangements were almost completed for them to come over with their nurse, the latter's family objected to her sailing for America at this time. So, instead, Mme. Wessell will go back to her homeland, spend the summer there; and then early in the autumn, she will return to Washington, bringing her children with her.

Shortly after she arrived here in November, I happened to meet Mme. Wessel at an after-the-theater supper party. And it was there I learned something of the amazing chain of experiences that were a prelude to the Washington chapter in her life. For ten years she had lived in Paris, where her husband was with his country's legation.

Then, when the war began, he was called to arms and sent to the Finnish frontier of Sweden. Meanwhile, she and her children stayed on in Paris, for weeks completely cut off from any communication with Capt. Wessel or other members of the family in Sweden.

After the fall of France, however, she and her children left Paris by automobile for the north coast, on their way home. In the occupied territory, she encountered a German column and presently her automobile had collided with a tank. Three weeks in a German hospital followed and after that she resumed her trip to Sweden. Meanwhile, her husband had been ordered to the legation here and was in Tokio, en route to America. She came on to join him here in November.

Pretty, chic, and vital, with a wide range of interests and a flair for making friends, Mme. Wessel has been quite a social asset to Washington, and her apartment at the Woodward has been the scene of numerous dinners and gayly informal afternoon fetes. Capt. and Mme. Wessel will gather in a few friends on Thursday afternoon, after 5:30 o'clock for a farewell-for-a-while fete for the hostess.

MRS. ALBEN BARKLEY has one major worry these days. She's afraid that bottle of champagne won't break at the right time—or at all—when she smashes it across the stern of the S. S. President Van Buren on Thursday at noon. "If I only had some way to practice!" Mrs. Barkley wailed yesterday.

Meanwhile, plans have been completed for the ceremony, which will be witnessed by a large number of Washingtonians. The party will leave here by train late Wednesday afternoon for Baltimore, and will sail from there to Old Point Comfort, Va. Breakfast at the Chamberlin Hotel is the next appointment scheduled, and directly after that, Mrs. Barkley and her guests will be off to Newport News, Va., where the ceremony will take place at 12 o'clock. Mrs. Max O'Rell Truitt will serve as matron of honor and Miss Gladys Carter will be maid of honor.

Among those who will be in the launching stand are Senator and Mrs. Josiah Bailey, Representative and Mrs. Otis Bland, Representative and Mrs. Luther Johnson, Henry F. Grady, president of the President Steamship Lines; Mrs. Walter George, Mrs. A. Mitchell Palmer, Maritime Commission Capt. Edward Macauley, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Truitt, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Condon, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hopkins, Mr. and Mrs. William Stanley, and Mrs. O. Max Gardner.

Following the launching, Mrs. Barkley will be guest of honor at a luncheon at the James River Country Club, which is located up the peninsula from Newport News. The Washington party will return home by boat that evening.

VITAL STATISTICS: Something new in the way of a birth announcement hit my desk yesterday under the guise of a mimeographed press release from the "Holland Infant Commission." Carrying a Washington, D. C., date line, the announcement in part follows:

"Completion of a nine-month construction project making possible the establishment of the Holland Infant Commission was announced today by Mary and Kenneth Holland, director and assistant director of the new research organization. . . . In no way will this venture compete with the activities of the American Youth Commission, with which Mr. Holland is associated, since the Infant Commission will concentrate, at least for a time, on a boy under one year of age."

The "preliminary study" includes personnel data to the effect that "the subject of intensive study is Kenneth Kimball Holland, born, April 21. Height (if stood up) is 20 inches. Weight, 7 pounds 6 ounces. Employment status: "Out of a job (but providing employment for a host of others) . . .

"In an off-the-record interview the members of the Holland family commented as follows—Mother: 'Confidentially, I'm glad it's a boy.' Father: 'He's marvelous. You can be sure the subject of this study is no ordinary child.' Dutch, the family dog: 'It's about time. How empty life has been for me, a shepherd collie, without even one little lamb. . . .

"The supplies and equipment for the study during the first year, as selected by the father will include: one electric train with all the gadgets, one bicycle, one scooter, one sled, one pony and cart, one outboard motor, and one strip-down racer."

Several other pertinent facts, statements and theories also are included in the press release; but this much, at least, gives you an idea of the announcement.

A GRADY PARTY by any other name would be just as gala. From 5 to 7 o'clock yesterday afternoon Miss Patricia Grady proved that when she gathered in a number of friends "just to see Daddy"—Dr. Henry F. Grady, who is in town for a few days.

"I'm not giving a party," she went on, "just a little informal get-together."

The fete was also by way of being a sort of celebration as Mrs. Grady, now in San Francisco, is well on her way to recovery after a serious illness, and is hoping to be back in Washington for a visit before long. The hostess yesterday received wherever she happened to be. She wore a floor length frock made with a red jersey blouse and a plaid skirt in shades of red, green and yellow.

Among those assisting were Miss Louise McNutt, Mrs. Frank Waring, Miss Florence Fisher, and Mrs. Walter Wyatt. Also seeing that everybody had a good time was Reginald Grady, brother of the hostess.

I saw Mrs. Claude Wickard there, chatting with Mrs. Oscar Chapman; and the Chinese Ambassador, Dr. Hu Shih, completely surrounded by a bevy of admirers. Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Bell arrived early; also, Justice and Mrs. Justin Miller, Mrs. D. Worth Clark, Mrs. Frank Buck, and Judge Marion J. Harron with her mother, Mrs. Charles Merrill Harron. Mrs. Alben Barkley was completely surrounded from the moment she arrived with her daughter, Mrs. Max Truitt. Mrs. Gifford Pinchot and Mrs. Barnet Nover were chatting about one of their current causes, while Mrs. Irene Caldwell vowed she was taking a rest from benefit ticket selling for a while.

The Hunt Country

By Nina Carter Tabb

THE GOLD CUP races on Saturday and the starting of Virginia Garden Week yesterday have members of the hunt country enjoying the busiest week of the season.

The garden tour will last through Saturday. Yesterday the Grand Duchess Charlotte of Luxembourg received guests visiting Oatlands, the lovely home of Mrs. William Corcoran Eustis. The grand duchess will receive at Stratford, the birthplace of Gen. Robert E. Lee in Westmoreland County, on Thursday.

THE APPLE BLOSSOM festival in Winchester, to be held Thursday and Friday, is expected to draw a mammoth crowd. Luncheons and cocktail fetes have been planned in connection with the event. Miss Mollie Foulkes Lee, of New York—a direct descendant of Richard Henry Lee—will preside as Queen Shenandoah. Edward R. Stettinius, jr., will crown the queen.

TO RETURN to the Virginia Gold Cup races: A new gold cup has been contributed for the event as Mrs. Frank M. Gould retired the cup last year with her horse, Black Sweep. The new cup, which was purchased by the committee, came from the Imperial collection of the late Tsar Mikolai in the Hermitage Museum in St. Petersburg.

A luncheon for members of the committee and their guests will be served in the members enclosure on the top of the hill at Broadview. M. F. H. of Warrenton Hunt, Amory S. About the Town with Dudley Harmon

EVEN cocktail parties in Washington are beginning to take on a faintly martial air. The other afternoon when Mr. and Mrs. Julius Amberg entertained, one of the men from Mr. Amberg's office—the host is special assistant to Secretary Stimson—appeared in full uniform.

"But he doesn't look quite right," puzzled a feminine guest. "Oh, I've got it. He isn't holding those two cigarettes—the old size and the longer one."

Their house at 2821 N Street some day may bear a sign informing tourists that Harry Hopkins once lived there. It would be interesting if walls could talk, for surely some weighty conversations have taken place in the little living room, with its fireplace and soft green walls. The Ambergs thought they had never kept house in such narrow quarters, so took a tape measure and found their house is exactly 14 feet wide.

At the back, off the second floor, is a long, narrow garden with a small paved terrace. Red geraniums in little pots bloom on the wall. Franklin Mott Gunther, our Minister to Rumania, owns this house and the one opposite, which is leased to the Rodman Wanamakers.

HENRY LUCE and Clare Boothe are en route to Singapore. Both Mr. and Mrs. Luce take a great interest in United China, which staged a successful benefit Sunday evening at Constitution Hall.

Seen here and there: William Bullitt pacing up and down the hall just off the stage before going on to speak . . . the benefit chairman, Mrs. Paul McNutt, in green crepe and an ermine jacket . . . Mrs. Joseph E. Davies just across the aisle from Senator and Mrs. Millard Tydings . . . Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg sitting toward the back of the hall, and wearing a spring bonnet with her dark coat . . . the solemn looking Chinese gentlemen, all in identical black satin dress, sharing a box . . . uniformed members of the Chinese Youth Club speaking their native language, with many an American "O. K." thrown in.

"YOU HAVE no idea how strange it is to be a passionately anonymous assistant to the President one week and reviewing the Chinese army the next." Laughlin Currie was telling friends some of his recent experiences as a group sat on a pleasant lawn in nearby Virginia the other afternoon.

When he flew to China at the invitation of Gen. Chang Kai-shek, Mr. Currie was welcomed everywhere he went with banners and crowds. He said now he understands why officials inspecting troops always stop every few minutes to examine a rifle or chat with a soldier. According to him, the impact of thousands of eyes fixed rigidly on you is so numbing that you have to do something.

Mr. Currie is particularly enthusiastic about Mme. Kai-shek. He says she's all we've read of her, and that she speaks "American." All three of the famous Soong sisters gave a dinner in his honor while he was there.

THE AMERICAN Ambassador to Cuba and Mrs. George S. Messersmith are in Washington until the end of the week. Asked the other night at dinner if he was here on vacation, Mr. Messersmith replied he didn't intend to take one until the war ended. The Messersmith's have finished building a house at Rehoboth but have no idea when they'll move in.

DORSEY FISHER left Washington yesterday and will board the clipper this week for his new post at the London Embassy. He's taking only the allowed 60 pounds of baggage with him.

Seamen's Library Head Discusses D. C. Drive

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor

Mrs. Henry Howard, of Boston, founder and president of the American Merchant Marine Library Association, was in Washington yesterday conferring with Mrs. Charles L. McNary, local chairman, on plans for the annual book drive to be conducted by the local committee May 12 to 19.

The association, which last year circulated 265,000 books and 365,000 magazines to ships of the American Merchant Marine, and to the Coast Guard which now includes the Lighthouse Service, was the outgrowth of work done during the World War, Mrs. Howard told me. At that time she organized the Social Service Bureau for the Recruiting Service of the U. S. Shipping Board . . . a service of which her husband was the head. "Ships and More Ships" was then the slogan for the United States faced the task of building a Merchant Marine practically from scratch.

In her work she saw the great need for books for the seamen and got the American Library Association to do the library work for training and merchant ships until after the Armistice.

Program Dropped After Amistice

To her great disappointment, she learned a few months after the Armistice that effective wartime effort had been dropped because the peacetime program of the association did not provide means for such activities. She made immediate protest against its discontinuance, pleading that the excellent work be carried on, if not by the Library Association, then by some other organization formed for the specific purpose. Unlike the Army and Navy, the Merchant Marine has no Government library service, Mrs. Howard pointed out.

The answer she received was notice that she had been named the American Library Association's representative to form such an organization.

Calling together a small group of women in New York, she began what she knew would be a vast undertaking, but one she believed was urgently needed. In the beginning, it was difficult to convince persons that seamen really desired to read, said Mrs. Howard, but they have proved to be greater readers than any other type of working men. With four hours on and eight off, they have much leisure time to spend with no place to go and, during long voyages, books provide one of their chief diversions.

The "green chests" which contain about 40 books each may be exchanged at any office of the association or between ships at foreign ports, and the association has a record of every book that it out. They are of all kinds, historical biographical, technical and fiction, with heavy emphasis on mystery stories, but the libraries are kept free of propaganda, Mrs. Howard declared.

She Is Author Of Handbook

Each chest also always contains the "Seaman's Handbook for Shore Leave," of which she is the author. The Maritime Commission has thought so highly of the handbook, it is now using it for graduates of its schools.

The headquarters of the American Merchant Marine Library Association is at 45 Broadway, New York City, with other offices at Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore, New Orleans, Seattle, Portland and Sault Ste. Marie. The latter supplies all of the ships on the Great Lakes which fly the American flag and as often answers calls in the middle of the night as the middle of the day during the season that the Lakes are open, Mrs. Howard said.

There is greater need than ever before for support of the work of the association because of the defense shipbuilding program, she said. Each new merchant ship is to be provided with a chest of books when it sails. There is, however, a waiting list of ships, lighthouses and lightships whose needs cannot be filled because the association has not had sufficient books or funds to meet the demands. Either books or money may be contributed. There are many subscribers in every State and from all walks of life, she added.

Mrs. Howard came here from Norfolk, Va., with her husband for a brief stay on their way home from Florida, having come from the South as far as Norfolk aboard their yacht. They were guests at the home of Gen. and Mrs. Edward St. John Greble, and were entertained at dinner Sunday night by Dr. and Mrs. Gilbert S. Grosvenor.

Maryland GOP Women Hear Mrs. Church

Mrs. Ralph Church, wife of former Representative Church, of Illinois, yesterday was guest speaker at the State-wide conference of the Maryland Federation of Republican Women's Clubs, held at the Lord Calvert Inn, College Park, Md.

Mrs. Church, who was introduced by Mrs. William H. Chase, of Riverdale, State president, spoke on nonpartisan lines, urging that women of the country unite their efforts to create a feminine force in the Nation which would prepare not only for a war emergency but for peace—"I do not mean the peace to follow the present world war," she said, "but peacetime problems."

Women, she said, should give attention to conditions within the country which need remedying. "We can best defend democracy by sticking to our own last and making our democracy something worth fighting for. We must revitalize our home living, our education, and interest ourselves in civic conditions and in religion in order that the force we can muster shall be not only great but potent," she declared.

Representative Frances P. Bolton, of Ohio, who was to have spoken, was called out of the city by the illness of a member of her family.

A. Charles Stewart, Reublican candidate for the Congressional seat in the Sixth Maryland District vacated by the death of William D. Byron, Democrat, was introduced at the afternoon session and talked briefly on his candidacy.

The federation this season will continue to devote its interest to support a measure providing jury service for women in the State of Maryland. The bill lost only by one vote recently.

To Hold May Party Friday

The annual May party at the Washington Home for Foundlings, located just off Wisconsin Avenue at River Road and Brandywine Street, will be held on Friday, with card playing beginning at 2 o'clock. Tea will be served from 4 to 6.

The public is invited to become acquainted with the home and the care given the little inmates. The affair is in charge of the Pierce Guild, an auxiliary of the Home, which provides for the upkeep of the building and other needs not included in the Community Chest budget.

Federation Adopts Resolution Opposing D.C. Rent-Control Bill

The District Federation of Women's Clubs at its meeting at Hotel 2400 yesterday, passed a resolution opposing H. R. 3736, known as the Rent Control Act for the District.

After a study of the proposed measure the legislative committee of which Mrs. William Ernest Howard is chairman, pointed out that "aside from fact that no legal emergency exists and that passage of such bill would curtail one of the greatest construction periods that Washingon has experienced, here are other suggestions embodied within it that enable and compel us to believe that Washington is opposed to this kind of invasion of the American home."

The Federation meeting yesterday was marked by the presentation by Mrs. Ernest Humphery Daniel, the president, of medals to two members selected for honor as "pioneer club women" of the District in connection with the golden jubilee celebration of the General Federation of Women's Clubs. These two, chosen from among candidates for the honor who were offered by the various clubs in the local federation, are Mrs. Julia Webb of the Excelsior Literary Club and Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley whose name was presented by the Housekeepers' Alliance. Mrs. John Frizzell was chairman of the Pioneer Club Women Committee.

Mrs. Webb received the medal for the longest membership in a federated club, as she has belonged to the Excelsior Literary Club since it was founded in 1887.

Mrs. Wiley was awarded the medal as the most outstanding club woman of the federation, of which she is a past president. She also has served as president of the Housekeepers Alliance, of the Women's City Club, and has been actively affiliated with many other organizations, including the National Woman's Party of which she is now the national chairman. She also is serving as chariman of the division of Indian Welfare of the General Federation, and heads the local committee of the Save the Children Federation.

These two women will be the District federation's candidates for the national pioneer club women awards at the triennial convention of the general federation to be held in Atlantic City in May.

Lee R. Pennington, inspector for the Federal Bureau of Investigation, addressed the afternoon session, talking on the activities of the F. B. I. in connection with national defense. He and Mrs. Pennington were also honor guests at the luncheon.

THE WASHINGTON COUNCIL of Church Women has just issued its spring bulletin announcing some of the events on its schedule. The May Day luncheon will be held May 1 at the Washington Hotel at 12:45 with Bishop Adna Wright Leonard of the Washington area of the Methodist Church as speaker.

On May 18 "Wardrobe Day" will be observed by members of the council, of which Mrs. George A. Ross is president, succeeding Mrs. Frank A. Linzel. Through the Juvenile Court department, for which Miss Etta Mai Russell is professional social worker, a call has been issued to the church women to go through their own wardrobes and to gather all the used clothes they can from their neighbors to be distributed to needy families known to the Juvenile Court. The clothing should be delivered on May 19 and 20 to Room 305 of the Juvenile Court Building, Fourth and E Streets Northwest, where the wardrobe committeee, under Mrs. W. W. Cranford, will handle it.

On May 19, at 10 a. m., Juvenile Court day will be observed at the Juvenile Court Building, when those interested in the court may visit the building. Mrs. Harold B. Rogers is chairman of the Juvenile Court committtee. She also will serve as general chairman of the doll day, the date of which will be announced later. Another spring and summer activity of the council will be the annual alley window box project. This will be carried on under the chairmanship of Mrs. Walter Kline, of Chevy Chase.

THE DOLL DAYS are for the purpose of collecting dolls to be distributed in the summer at the doll adoption centers which have been set up for several seasons by the council under Miss Russell's direction. These, according to the bulletin, are conducted in order to help make the church the center of life in the community; to teach child care to children through the program of caring for their dolls; to acquaint the mothers in the community with existing agencies and to enable the church to become better acquainted with the people of the community and thereby serve them more effectively.

The camp program through which children known to the Juvenile Court are given summer vacations in camp with the aid of the council, is another phase of its work of which the members are reminded.

The bulletin, which is made attractive by little illustrations and an original poem or two, is edited by Miss Russell, who now has the title of executive secretary of the council as well as Juvenile Court worker. The council maintains an office at the headquarters of the Washington Federation of Churches, 1749 N Street, with Mrs. W. H. Everhardy as office secretary, and Miss Russell has her office in Room 305 of the Juvenile Court Building.

Benefit Party Today

A card party and style show will be given by the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Senior High School P.-T. A. this afternoon at 1:30 with the style show at 3:30. The party will be held at the school gym and the money raised is for the student loan fund to help graduates go to college. Mrs. George Mathews is chairman.

Mrs. Kirby Wins Poetry Prize

The first prize in the members' poetry contest of the Washington Branch of the American Association of University Women went to Inez Barclay Kirby (Mrs. Paul L. Kirby) for her two poems entitled "Breath" and "Mold." The awards were made last night at a dinner at the clubhouse.

The second prize was won by Caroline Hogue (Mrs. Richard Hogue) for her poem "Robinson Jeffers, Now I Understand You," and the third was awarded to Neva Galbreath Givens (Mrs. Willard Givens), for "The Pilot." Honorable mention was given to Dr. Carrie Weaver Smith and to Miss Betsy Winter.

The judges were Paul H. Oehser, Miss Lura Beam and Miss Alberta Walker. Miss Mary Rose Parkman, who has served as leader of the Martha MacLear poetry group during the past year, presided at the dinner and Miss Anna Pearl Cooper read the poems.

High Pay, Draft Take Seamen, U.S. Board Told

Selective Service and the lure of higher wages in shipbuilding concerns are depleting the supply of merchant seamen, the Maritime Commission was told yesterday at an industry-wide conference here concerned with providing adequate personnel for the Nation's growing merchant marine.

Joseph Curran, president of the C. I. O. National Maritime Union, and Vincent J. Malone, of the unaffiliated Pacific Coast Marine Firemen, Oilers and Wipers Union, noted complaints that local boards of the Selective Service were inconsistent in their atttitude toward qualified seamen, some of them seeming "glad of the chance to grab a man and throw him into the Army."

Harry Lundberg, of the A. F. of L. Sailors Union of the Pacific, declared that the main reason for the seamens' scarcity was wages for riggers in shipyards are so high that the former sailors "have no incentive to go back to the ships."

After a general meeting the commission appointed committees of various categories of seagoing personnel and recessed the conference to await their suggestions.

Meantime, the OPM Labor Division convened in conference here yesterday to set uniform wages and working standards in shipbuilding yards on the Atlantic Coast. The meetings were attended by representatives of A. F. of L. and C. I. O. unions, 62 private shipbuilding firms and representatives of the Navy, Maritime Commission, and Labor Department.

In opening the conference, Sidney Hillman, associate director general of the OPM, declared that of the $5,400,000,000 under contract for ship construction, $4,000,000,000, or 75 per cent, has been awarded to 37 private yards and 6 Navy yards on the Atlantic Coast. He estimated the contracts awarded so far as calling for the equivalent of one year's work for 1,000,000 men.

Hillman asked that a working agreement be adopted which would include machinery to provide for grievance adjustment wtihout strikes, lockouts or other work interruptions.

Schenck Files Appeal On His Tax Conviction

New York, April 28 (AP).—Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board of Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation, and Joseph H. Moskowitz, his Eastern representative, appealed today their conviction of income tax evasion.

A notice of appeal, filed in Federal court, was expected to defer their surrender to serve prison terms. Schenck is under three years' sentence and Moskowitz, a year and a day. They had been ordered to surrender by May 12.

Girls Outside U. S. Service Join Dancees

In response to "hundreds of requests," non-Government girls now are being registered as "dancees" to srrve as partners at dances in nearby Army posts, it was announced yesterday by the District Defense Council.

Qualified girls should register at dance-draft headquarters, room 500, in the District Building, Committee Chairman Archie Edwards said.

Meanwhile, six dances at Army posts were announced for this week, beginning with one tonight at Fort Belvoir, for which 50 dancees have been called.

Others are tomorrow night at Fort Meade, 75 girls; Wednesday at Belvoir, 250; Thursday at Belvoir, 50; Friday at the Arlington Cantonment, 50, and Saturday at Belvoir, 250.

New identification plans for dancees are being considered by the council this week. At present dancees are being invited to the Army dances individually, by mail. By next week, each is expected to be given a number, and the "draft call" is to be made by publishing the numbers of those invited in the newspapers. A photo-pass system is expected to be completed within three months, with each girl being identified by her picture on a regulation pass.

Contract Bridge

Declarer of today's hand was playing with just a deck of ordinary cards, but he made them perform a bit of legal larceny. One trick shy of his three no-trump contract, South faced a finesse, and when his opponent withheld the winning card, the hand was in.

South's act took East's heart queen, and he immediately led the jack of spades hoping that West held the ace, to lure him into thinking that a finesse was being taken against the queen.

West was roped in and played small. Declarer put on the king to mislead East should he hold the ace instead of his partner; and when the king won, South dashed home with the rest of his tricks, five diamonds, two clubs.

Had South put off running through the delusive jack of spades until after the diamonds were taken West would have had time to learn the true situation and would have prevented the steal. As it was, West feared South held the heart jack guarded and welcomed a chance for a lead through it from East.

South took the heart ace on the first round as a holdup would have revealed that his jack was not protected.

'Privilege Hitherto Known Must Disappear Into Common Pool' After War, Bevin Promises British Labor, Whose Rights Are Suspended Till Victory

By J. Reagan McCrary,
International News Service Staff Writer

New York, April 28.—If England wins, the victory will belong to the bearded men of the Merchant Navy, to the middle class Royal Air Force recruits in their Hurricanes and Spitfires, to the workers in the factories, and to their wives and "their kiddies" who sleep in subways and brewery basements when the Jerries shed their bombs.

That, you might say, is the stuff out of which revolutions explode. And to support your fears, you can hear burly Minister of Labor Ernie Bevin growling:

"The society that is established at the end shall be upon the broadest possible basis, and privilege that we have hitherto known must entirely disappear into the common pool."

Echoed in The Times

But don't get uneasy. You can find his "revolutionary" prophecy echoed in the stuffy columns of The Times, a paper edited by Geoffrey Dawson. A famous Dawson "leader" editorial has heralded the new day:

"The European house cannot be put in order until we put our own house in order first. The new order cannot be based on the preservation of privilege, whether the privilege be that of a country, of a class, or of an individual."

Labor has great power under Winston Churchill; labor shunned the Chamberlain government.

But when Churchill moved in and declared a "people's war against Adolf Hitler, labor came aboard.

Seven Labor Party members are in the Churchill government—which indicates that Churchill's government is even more representative of the will of labor than the House of Commons, where the Conservatives still hold two-thirds of the seats.

Labor has power, yes. But labor has had to "shoulder arms" to beat Hitler. Not yet has British labor gone as far as the Nazis—where workers go into a standardized uniform this week.

But in Britain, dockers now work for the state; laborers in the shipbuilding industry call the Admiralty "boss."

And workers around Coventry are moving into barracks because their homes were bombed out.

To understand labor's role in Britain's war effort, let's compare it with things we know about in America.

Unlike labor in America, British labor cannot call a strike in any industry that feeds the war effort; and all industry does feed the war effort. But also unlike labor in America, British labor would not want to strike.

And to understand labor's role in the Churchill government, you must know labor's two strongest men: Ernest Bevin, 56, and Herbert Morrison, 52.

Ernest Bevin is Britain's John L. Lewis.

Herbert Morrison is Britain's Mayor LaGuardia.

Bevin was born to working people; orphaned at 8, he worked on a farm. Then came jobs as a streetcar "jockey," a restaurant waiter, a truck driver.

He Stole, Too

And then he tasted the salt that seasons a lot of labor's leaders—unemployment—for five years. And his first venture as a labor leader was as an organizer of the jobless.

And you can get his word for this: Because he was hungry, he stole food.

"If a working boy is good enough to handle a Spitfire, he is good enough to govern the country"—that's one of Bevin's newest maxims.

He began his rise as a union leader in the dockers' union, carter's section, in 1910.

And since then he has at various times before the war fought Winston Churchill.

But he has fought the Communists twice as hard as he ever fought Churchill.

Herbert Morrison, cockney, war born in London's Lambeth, son of a policeman and a chambermaid.

As friendly as LaGuardia, Morrison is "'Erbert" to the whole of London.

"Hitler Was Not Wise"

When the Labor Party gained control of the London county council that runs that city, Morrison became the head man in London.

He did for London what Robert Moses and Mayor LaGuardia have done for New York:

He widened streets, "green-belted" the city with parks, jazzed up the fire department, built new schools, expanded and modernized hospitals.

As minister of home security, "'Erbert" is now virtually mayor of every city and town in Britain. Everything from antigas measures to control of aliens is in Morrison's hands now.

"Hitler was not wise in the way he bombed my London," he says. "On the night after he bashed the docks and the homes of the dockers, he should have dropped pamphlets and told them that the rich in the West End were safe in their homes.

"But no, Hitler came back and bombed Buckingham Palace, and London was one city again, united.

"And as London is many cities, so is England many countries. There is Wales. There are the Midlands. There is Liverpool and Lancashire. There is Scotland. All different—in times of peace.

"But in this war, our strength is as the strength of ten, because our people are one."

The Federal Diary

Bridges Case Story Shows Need of Vigilance

A story has leaked out from the Justice Department which demonstrates how alert officials there have been and had to be, in dealing with the Harry Bridges deportation case. One day recently, it seems, a person appeared to volunteer sensational information that may prove valuable to the Government's case against the West Coast C. I. O. leader. A lawyer talked with the informer and later called in his secretary to take down a statement. Sometime later the attorney couldn't find the statement in his files. A search was ordered and the statement was found—in the trash, torn into bits. The secretary was called on the carpet. Her explanation didn't satisfy officials and she was fired on the spot.

Emil Schram, RFC chairman, will succeed Walter Tower as the minerals and metals expert in OPM's priorities division. Tower is on leave from the Iron and Steel Institute. Schram has been mentioned for half a dozen Federal jobs within the past several weeks and apparently he is anxious to leave RFC.

George M. Reynolds, 41-year-old Arkansan, has been appointed assistant director of the Surplus Marketing Administration. He will assist Director Milo Perkins in buying food for relief distribution, under the lend-lease bill, for the Red Cross, and for domestic reserves. Assistant Director Philip F. Maguire is assigned to food distribution for domestic relief, and Assistant Director E. W. Gaumnitz is handling marketing agreement work. Reynolds was State director of Farm Security in Arkansas.

Fred Walton, former PWA engineer, will be appointed president of the Virgin Islands Co. . . . Harry Shuart will succeed Carl Skinner as information director of the Maritime Commission when Carl joins the armed forces. . . . Harry Hopkins, lend-lease boss, is expected to give David Niles, his assistant at WPA and Commerce, a key job in the defense set-up. . . . Anita Cline, Roberta Cook, Mary Devaney, William Harris and Pearl Spicknall are arranging a hobby show at Farm Credit. . . . Congressional Secretaries Club will hold its annual dinner tonight in Harding Hall at GPO.

5 Appeal Dismissals

Five persons who were fired from WPA art projects on charges of unAmericanism, yesterday appealed to Assistant Commissioner Malcolm Miller for reinstatement. . . . Officials in Nelson Rockefeller's Office of Coordination of Commercial and Cultural Relations. Between the American Republics are promoting a shorter name for the agency. Suggested has been: Coordinator of inter-American Relations.

Frank Bane, chief of OPM's State and Local Cooperation Division, is expected to resign soon. He promised only to remain here for three months but he has already been here nearly three times, as long as that. . . . Defense administrative experts are debating whether to set up a transportation division in OPM or OEM. Ralph Budd is expected to be head of the division regardless of where it's put. . . . Interior Recreation Association will stage a Puerto Rican fiesta and dance Saturday night at Wardman Park. Ed Kelly, chairman, has arranged for two all-expense tours to be given as door prizes.

Representative Lindsey Beckworth of Texas has been assured by the Civil Service Commission that the maximum age for Civil Service exams is being advanced in order to meet emergency employment needs. The commission, Beckworth was told, also is hiring a larger number of physically handicapped persons. . . . Persons hired to take the jobs of drafted Federal employes won't be brought under Civil Service by the Ramspeck Bill. The jobs are supposed to be temporary and the President's order rules out temporary employes.

Most everyone in Washington at some time has been told the time by the clock in the tower of the old Postoffice Building at Eleventh Street and Pennsylvania Avenue. This clock has four faces, each 15 feet in diameter. Its hands are wooden, the minute hands are 7 feet long and the hour hands are 5 feet. Each set of hands weighs 4 pounds. The clock's hands were formerly steel, but during the hard winter of 1920 the hands froze stiff and they had to be replaced. The clock is wound by a hand crank every eight days.

Public Hearing On Traffic Plan Set for May 20

The public will be given an opportunity to be heard on the city's projected $44,450,000 highway improvement program on May 20 in the District Building board room. The Commissioners have called the meeting for 2 p. m.

Officials connected with the survey will be on hand to answer questions, Col. David McCoach, engineer commissioner, announced yesterday.

The traffic committee of the Board of Trade yesterday indorsed "in principle" recommendations contained in the 63-page report which was drafted by Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways.

After commending Whitehurst and F. W. Lovejoy, of the Public Roads Administration, who helped, Chairman P. Y. K. Howat said he would name a special subcommittee to study the plan before recommendations are made to the Board of Trade as a whole.

Invites Public Criticism.

Inviting public criticism of his proposed program, Whitehurst said that, at the public hearing, he would attempt to justify recommendations contained in the survey report.

"We want to know just what the public thinks about our plans," Whitehurst declared, "and the sooner we find out the sooner we can get the ball rolling. We don't say we have the perfect plan yet and we don't claim this to be a cure-all."

In response to questions at the Board of Trade luncheon meeting in O'Donnell's restaurant, Whitehurst said all projects outlined in the survey report would be paid for by the District with exception of the proposed tunnel beneath the Potomac River from Alexandria.

Would Seek U. S. Funds

Federal funds would be sought for this item, the highway director reported. Estimated cost of the tunnel is $9,500,000.

Under his present allotment of funds—$1,500,000 a year for major capital improvements—Whitehurst said the outlined program could not be completed in less than 20 years. With a 1-cent increase in the gasoline tax, he continued, the job could be done in from 12 to 13 years and with a 2-cent increase in about 8 years.

Asked at the luncheon meeting why subways were not recommended in the report, Whitehurst said the cost would be prohibitive and hauling distances too short to make them of any substantial benefit.

He visioned a time when street cars would be underpassed through points of heavy traffic, but said this probably would be in the distant future.

Arrangements are being completed at the District Building to accommodate several hundred persons at the public hearing on May 20.

Rushed to Casualty Hospital by the Branchville Rescue Squad, he was said to have a skull fracture and internal injuries.

Takoma Park police said the automobile in which Cross was riding was operated by Robert Read, 17, of 265 Park Avenue, Takoma Park, who was given first aid for leg injuries. Alexander E. Green, of Washington, listed as operator of the other automobile, was treated at the scene for cuts and bruises. Neither driver was held by police.

Zetlin's Violin Recital Here Is Superb

By Ray C. B. Brown

Emanuel Zetlin, violinist, assisted by David Stimer, pianist, gives a recital for the Washington Music Teachers' Association on Monday night in Phillips Memorial Gallery. Program: Sonata in A major, Op. 162 (Schubert), Prelude-Louree-Gavotte for violin alone (Bach), Concerto in A major, Op. 82 (Glazunov), La Chasse (Kreisler), Vieja Sevilla and Pano Murciano (Nin), Perpetual Motion (Tansman), Caprice No. 24 (Paganini-Auer.)

Members and guests of the Washington Music Teachers Association enjoyed last evening in Phillips Memorial Gallery a postponed violin recital by Emanuel Zetlin, faculty member of the Juilliard Graduate School and of the Washington College of Music. Illness interfered with Mr. Zetlin's intention to play here last January and a disrupted schedule delayed for three months the fulfillment of his promise. An innocent tardiness did not dull the edge of anticipation, and his performance proved well worth the wait.

BROWN

In his interesting program, he had the assistance of David Stimer, a consentient and skillful pianist. They began with the infrequently played A major sonata of Schubert, sometimes dubbed "Duo" as a distinguishing mark. Their reading was in an expressive romantic vein and a simple style which emphasized the sentiment of the melodies. This treatment was the right one for Schubert, whose emotional power resides entirely in his lyric eloquence.

Mr. Zetlin's command of pure tone was finely demonstrated in his performance of an unaccompanied Bach sonata. He kept the tone free from vibrato throughout the three movements and the singing line had perfect intonation such as only a sense of absolute pitch can maintain. Particularly admirable was the phrasing of the prelude with surety of rhythmic stresses.

Technical brilliance was reserved for the latter part of the program which contained as the major work the one-movement A major concerto of Glazunov. This was followed by a group of pieces: Joaquin Nin's "Vieja Sevilla" and "Pano Murciano," Kreisler's "La Chasse," a perpetual motion by Alexander Tansman, and Leopold Auer's version of Paganini's twenty-fourth caprice. Mr. Zetlin's virtuosity served him well in his facile handling of scintillant devices, and his remarkable tonal purity emerged again in the impeccably clear performance of the variation in harmonics in the Paganini caprice.

The musicians were enthusiastically applauded in every program pause, and at the close of the recital were insistently asked for an extra number. They responded with Kreisler's arrangement of a larghetto by Weber. Although the source of this piece has not been mentioned by the transcriber, it sounds like a paraphrase of the slow movement from the Trio in G minor.

Shift of Boy From Lorton Is Upheld

Juvenile Wards Must Not Be Treated As Criminals, Groner Rules

No matter what their behavior, boys placed in custody by the Washington Juvenile Court must not be treated as criminals, the United States Court of Appeals here declared yesterday.

Chief Justice D. Lawrence Groner spoke for the court in upholding the order of District Court Justice Bolitha J. Laws that Emory O'Bryant, 19, be taken out of Lorton Reformatory and sent back to the National Training School.

O'Bryant was less than 18 when he was convicted January 7, 1939, of robbing a railroad car. Judge Fay L. Bentley ordered him confined at the training school until he was 21. He escaped twice.

School authorities regarded the boy as "a bad influence" and he was transferred to Lorton. O'Bryant protested against the transfer by a petition for a habeas corpus, which was filed by Attorney John T. Bonner. Justice Laws granted the writ.

Assistant Attorney General Alexander Holtzoff and Special Attorney Herbert A. Bergson joined District Attorney Edward M. Curran in appealing the decision.

Chief Justice Groner declared that "a sentence by a court to a place of detention not authorized by law is void. What is true of the lack of power in a court . . . is more true in the case of the Attorney General." The chief justice then reviewed the Juvenile Court act and declared that its provisions place commitments under the control of the judge.

Lorton Reformatory is a place of confinement of "hardened criminals," the chief justice commented, "and the law does not intend that juveniles shall be placed there."

North Capitol

Establishment of a three-man Board of Recreation for the District, as provided by the Hunter bill before the House, was favored unanimously last night by members of the North Capitol Citizens Association, who denounced the present setup as "wholly ineffective and inefficient."

Indorsing a report by James A. Crooks, secretary of the association, the citizens accused the Interior Department, the National Capital Parks, and the Parks and Planning Commission of "completely dominating" the present recreation organization and termed them "wholly unqualified."

The report traced the present "playground dilemma" to the appointment of a coordinator in 1939 and a resultant lack of "any central authority," coupled with "destructive interference by Federal agencies."

The association also approved the principle of a sales tax for the District and opposed use of gasoline taxes for "other than highway purposes."

Brookland

Marvin M. McLean, who has already served the Brookland Citizens Association as president for 20 terms, was elected for another year at a meeting last night in the Masonic Temple at Eleventh and Monroe Streets Northeast. Joseph P. Quinn was reelected vice president, while Donald W. Mowbray was chosen for a first term as secretary-treasurer. McLean and Dr. George R. Ellis again will represent the association in the Federation of Citizens Associations.

A resolution approving a new central public library was adopted. It also asked for a Brookland branch library "at the earliest time possible."

Improvements in Brookland's street car and bus facilities were discussed by D. J. Locke, chief engineer of the Capital Transit Co.

Patient at St. Elizabeths Is Killed in Fall

Olav Mathiasen, 47-year-old patient at St. Elizabeths Hospital yesterday was killed in a fall from a 12-foot stepladder while washing walls in the institution. A former merchant seaman, he entered the hospital in 1923. Hospital attendants said he has no relatives here.

Randolph Predicts Recognition of D. C. Plea For Suffrage as Natives Mark 21st Year

"Congress eventually will realize that the people of the District should not be deprived of the rights and privileges of self-government," Representative Jennings Randolph, chairman of the House District Committee, last night told more than 125 native Washingtonians.

Randolph spoke at the twenty-first anniversary banquet of Society of Natives in the Mayflower Hotel, where District leaders reiterated the society's aim "to seek District suffrage until we get it."

"Although you do not yet have the vote, we on Capitol Hill hear the voices of Washington residents through organizations such as this one," Randolph said.

District Commissioner John Russell Young pledged his support to a suffrage amendment when he and Commissioner McCoach appear today at Senate Committee suffrage hearings and told of progress made in the District Building toward giving District jobs to District people.

These two objectives will be followed "as long as I am serving as a District Commissioner," Young promised.

John M. Howard, president of the society, and Washington I. Cleveland, toastmaster, introduced as honored guests: Edward M. Curran, United States attorney for the District; Richmond B. Keech, District corporation counsel; Harry N. Stull, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, and Jesse C. Suter, first president of the society.

Midcity Group Backs Traffic Control Plan

The street and bridge program proposed by Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways, won approval in principal from the Midcity Citizens Association last night. Nathan M. Lubar, Frank B. Hoffman and Dr. F. Thomas Evans were named a committee to make a detailed examination of the proposal and report back at the May meeting.

Also approved by the association were the Hunter bill to create a three-man recreation board here; the McCarran bill requiring candidates for the Public Utility Commission to be three-year residents here; the Reynolds bill to restrict sale of dangerous weapons in the District.

The Randolph rent control bill was opposed on the grounds that no rent emergency exists at the present.

The members also voted to seek a white playground in the association neighborhood; to continue agitation for construction of the new Abbott Vocational School at the Upshur Street site; to urge the President to name a people's counsel for the Public Utility Commission; to seek appointment of a Federation of Citizens Association's leader to the new armory commission.

Georgetown Citizens

Prediction that nursery schools for children 3 and 4 years old will be a part of the District public school system within 10 years was made by Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education, at the meeting of Georgetown Citizens Association last night.

She urged that citizens interested in such schools study the small projects already running, learn about costs and finally evolve their requests for inclusion of such schools in the District program. She said she thought the program here would have to start in a small way, and that it ought to come from the requests of citizens. She pointed out the value of such schools for underprivileged children and for children in apartment houses where play opportunities are limited.

Representatives of Burleith Citizens Association, Progressive Citizens Association of Georgetown and of the board of directors of Georgetown Childrens House were invited to the meeting, in St. John's Parish Hall.

In the brief business session, the Georgetown Association voted down a resolution which favored elimination of all-night parking on streets. It was offered by J. M. Wyckoff, chairman, in behalf of the traffic committee.

Guard Reforms While Arming, McNutt Says

America must hold and strengthen its social reforms, while gearing for defense effort, Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security Administrator, told the Democratic Women's National Council banquet at the Hotel 2400 last night.

"It would be a mockery to manufacture 50,000 airplanes to defend a third of a nation living in slums," he said. "It would be hypocrisy to ask a million of our men to fight for the right of their families and children to die of malnutrition and disease."

Citing the social reforms of the last eight years, he said: "We have determined to confer economic citizenship on every American. These things, for us, are democracy. They are its cream. And I don't believe we are going to give them up—and then give our lives to defend the skimmed milk."

McNutt said he, as Health and Welfare Coordinator, "must enlist immediate whole-hearted support" on three fronts:

"We must mesh the gears of all the Federal activities which contribute to the strengthening of community services for health, welfare, recreation and education.

"Our second job is to enable all these Federal agencies to help and and not to enervate State and local activities. In a democracy, we do not want an all-powerful centralized Government to weaken State, local and individual powers. We do not even want a benevolently parternalistic Government which will sap the energy of its component parts under the guise of helping them.

"Finally there is the most important sector of the home front, the area in which the Government relies on the activities of private groups and individuals," he said, citing the campaign to raise $10,700,000 by public subscription for service clubs in 339 communities near camps, naval stations and defense industry centers. This campaign is for work of the United Service Organizations.

Senator Josh Lee (Democrat), of Oklahoma, and Mrs. Lee; Mrs. Ellen Woodward, member of the Social Security Board, and Mrs. McNutt were among the guests at the speakers' table. Mrs. Walter H. Maloney was toastmistress.

School Riot Leads to 3 Resignations

Superintendent, Wife And Boys' Supervisor Of Industrial Home Institution Quit

The resignation of Earle W. Cassie, superintendent of the Industrial Home School on Wisconsin Avenue Northwest, scene of a recent ri Northwest, scene of a recent riot among inmates, was accepted late yesterday by the Commissioners.

Acting on recommendations of the Board of Public Welfare, the Commissioners also accepted the resignations of Cassie's wife, Mrs. Cassie E. Cassie, a nurse at the institution, and Eugene D. Lindner, former California professional football player, who was supervisor of boys.

Because of accrued leave, Cassie's resignation will not be effective until July 30, but he has been relieved of administrative responsibility as of April 24, according to Welfare Director Robert Bondy.

Lindner resigned Tuesday night following the upheaval when young inmates smashed furniture and hurled beds and bedding from the windows. Mrs. Cassie submitted her notice with her husband's.

Cassie has been in charge of the school for 18 years. Bondy said he had made an excellent record and was in no way to blame for last week's rioting.

Conrad Van Hyning, newest member of the Board of Public Welfare, is acting superintendent of the institution. Bondy said a successor to Cassie has not been found.

Bondy's findings after an investigation of the trouble Tuesday night were approved yesterday by the welfare board. He fixed no responsibility for the affair on any official of the school, blaming inadequate facilities and generally bad conditions for the trouble.

"A residential section of that type is not place for a detention institution of any kind," Bondy declared, "and the sooner we can provide a more suitable location the better."

Bondy emphasized that Cassie's resignation was not requested, but was submitted voluntarily and accepted at his own insistence.

Dodgers Nose Out Reds, 3-2, and Take Lead

Wyatt Hurls, Bats Flock To Victory

Smacks a Single in Ninth to Score the Winning Run; Paul Derringer Is Beaten

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, April 28.—The not-so daffy Brookyn Dodgers squeezed out their seventh straight victory and took over the National League lead today in a dramatic 3-to-2 struggle with the World Champion Cincinnati Reds.

Whitlow Wyatt, 31-year-old right-hander with a big bald spot on the back of his head and a fast ball in his fingers, outpitched rugged Paul Derringer and won his own game with a single in the ninth inning with two runners on base and two out.

It was a great personal triumph for Wyatt, who was beaten five times by the Reds last year. He fanned 10 of his foes and scattered six hits, the same number allowed by Derringer.

Wyatt Singles, Breaks Tie

And in the end, with the score tied since the seventh stanza, he rolled a hot single through shortstop to score Jim Wasdell from second.

It was the only game of the day in the senior circuit and a big Monday turnout of 17,240 basked in the sun at Ebbets Field to cheer their Dodgers past the idle St. Louis Cardinals in the standings.

For three scoreless innings the two big right-handers matched pitch for pitch. Wyatt had hurled shutouts his last two times out against the Bees and Phillies and it began to look like a question of how many scoreless innings he could string together.

Lombardi Hits Triple

The Reds came back in the first of the seventh when Ernie Lombardi, their slow, hulking catcher, led off with a triple. The ball stuck momentarily in the screen high up in right center and fell away from two Dodger fielders. But Lombardi had to slide, sore ankle notwithstanding to get into third base. Manager Bill McKechnie sent in Mike McCormick to run for him and after Harry Craft fanned, Eddie Joost raised a fly to center and McCormick beat the throw home with the tying run.

A walk and a single by F. McCormick presented a threat in the eighth, but Wyatt struck out Jim Gleeson. Then in the ninth Wyatt made good after Wasdell singled, advanced on an infield out and Owen again had been intentionally passed.

The series has three more games to go.

Leiber Signs Cub Contract; Gets Pay Hike

By the United Press

Chicago, April 28.—Hank Leiber, last of the major league holdouts signed today with the Chicago Cubs and joined his mates for a road series opening tomorrow at Boston.

LEIBER

Leiber ended his 62-day resistance against the Cubs' $13,000 offer after prolonged conferences with General Manager Jimmy Gallagher.

The new salary terms were not revealed, but Leiber bolted negotiations Saturday when Gallagher refused to boost the annual wage above $13,000. The new figure was believed to be near $15,000.

Leiber, a hard-hitting outfielder, figured in Manager Jimmy Wilson's early season plans for remodeling an infield with Leiber at first base. Leiber hit .302 with the Cubs last year.

Before entraining for Boston, Wilson said he may use Leiber at first before the season is half done.

Dow and Carroll Sign 'Skin Contracts

One newcomer and one veteran yesterday signified their intentions of playing with the Washington Redskins in 1941. Ken Dow, Oregon State fullback who averaged 4.85 yards per try last year, put his name on a new contract, and Vic Carroll, seasoned center, renewed his old agreement with the 'Skins.

Coach Bob Neyland Is Called by Army

Tennessee Football Mentor Ordered to Report In May for Duty; Blow to Vol Grid Hopes

By the Associated Press

Knoxville, Tenn., April 28.—Maj. Robert Reece Neyland, University of Tennessee athletic director and one of the highest paid football coaches in the country, will report for duty with the United States Army Engineers in May.

As soon as the news of the retired major's new orders reached the campus today the athletic council announced that his successor would be named May 10.

Speculation arose immediately as to whether one of the major's coaching aides would be given the head coaching assignment or if an "outsider" would be signed.

Several Coaches Considered

Dean Nathan W. Dougherty, chairman of the council, said several applicants were being considered.

The man who sent Tennessee to three bowl games in three years of undefeated and untied Southeastern Conference football competition was en route to Knoxville from Tampa, Fla., where he and his wife have been fishing.

Neyland's chief assistants on the coaching staff are Maj. Bill Britton, end coach who resigned his Army commission several years ago, and John Barnhill, a Vol alumnus who has been directing line play. The names of both have been mentioned as possible successors. Britton was head coach in 1935 when Neyland was on an Army assignment in Panama.

Signed for $15,000

In 1938, 1939 and 1940, the Vols were undefeated in regular season play, winning bids to the Orange, Rose and Sugar Bowls on successive New Year's Days. They defeated Oklahoma at Miami but lost to Southern California in the Rose Bowl and Boston College at New Orleans.

After the '38 season, Neyland was given a new contract reportedly calling for an annual salary of $15,000, a $3,000 increase.

During the reign of Neyland, Tennessee's gridders have won 119 games, lost 14 and tied 8.

3 Harvard Crews Score In Cup Event

By the United Press

Cambridge, Mass., April 28.—Harvard College crews won the annual Rowe Cup event for the fifth successive year tonight by outrowing Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Boston University in the season's first regatta on Charles River.

A stiff wind made the meet a test of watermanship instead of speed as Harvard massed 24 points by decisively winning the varsity and junior varsity races and nipping M. I. T. in the 150-pound division. Tech was second with 15 points, and B. U. trailed with 5.

Rowing the regular Henley distance of 1 5-16 miles, Harvard's varsity eight pulled a steady 33-34 beat down river and outdistanced M. I. T. by two lengths and B. U. by four to finish in 6:56.2.

The regatta's most exciting finish came in the 150-pound race. Tech, leading substantially at the ¾ mile mark, floundered when a gust of wind blew the bow man's oar aside. Harvard picked up the loss and won by 1-5 of a second. The Crimson captured the J-V event in 7:04, two lengths ahead of M. I. T.

Varsity: Won by Harvard, 6:56 1-5; second, M. I. T., 7:03 3-5; third, Boston University, 7:30.

Junior Varsity: Won by Harvard, 7:04; second, M. I. T., 7:14; third, Boston University, 8:02.

150-Pound Varsity: Won by Harvard, 7:15; second, M. I. T., 7:15 1-5.

150-pound Junior-Varsity: Won by Harvard, 7:23.5; second, M. I. T., 8:00.

Freshmen: Won by M. I. T., 7:18; second, Harvard, 7:28; third, Boston University, 8:00.

Nat Farmhand Hurls No-Hitter

Winston-Salem, N. C., April 28 (AP).—Hardin Cathey pitched a no-hit, no-run game here tonight as the Charlotte Hornets defeated the Winston-Salem Twins, 9-0. Dick Korte was the only runner to reach third off the giant speed-ball artist, and he accomplished the feat by getting hit by a pitched ball, going to second on a wild pitch and third on Cathey's wild throw attempting to catch him at second.

Pritchard led Charlotte's 15-hit attack with two home runs, a triple and single in five trips.

California May Take Over Race Tracks in Future

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, April 28.—Jerry Giesler, chairman of the State Racing Commission, said today the State might take over and operate all horse racing tracks in California.

Discussing racing bills now before the State legislature, Giesler said there was so much greed being shown by certain groups in the racing business, and so much squabbling, that the public might become disgusted.

If the State should take over the tracks it would get 12 per cent of the take, instead of the 4 per cent it now receives, thereby boosting its gross income from $3,500,000 a year to $10,500,000. He did not know how the State would acquire control.

Indians Win, 7-2, Tighten Grip on First

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, April 28.—A 7-to-2 victory over the champion Detroit Tigers—their third straight—gave the Cleveland Indians a tighter grip on first place today and their fourth successive win.

Southpaw Al Milnar scattered six hits and struck out five as he turned in his second verdict in three games.

The Indians also were held to six—four of them off the loser, Hal Newhouser, who struck out nine batters before wildness overtook him in the seventh. Dizzy Trout and Hal White finished.

Cleveland opened the scoring in the fourth as Beau Bell tripled and crossed the plate on Ken Keltner's roller. Detroit tied it up in the fifth with doubles by Pinky Higgins and George (Tuck) Stainback. A three-run Indian rally in the sixth put the game on ice. With the count three and two and the bases loaded after Newhouser walked two and Keltner singled, Roy Weatherly got a single.

Hank Greenberg's double in the seventh, followed by a pair of infield outs, accounted for the Tigers' second run. In the same inning, Newhouse opened the Tribe's half by issuing two passes, then a bad throw by Higgins filled the bases. When the Detroit southpaw next cut loose with a wild pitch, Manager Del Baker replaced him with Trout.

Gerald Walker, Cleveland left fielder, strained his back when he missed the first strike in the seventh and was replaced by Jeff Heath.

Travis and Lewis May Get Army Deferrment

Selective Service Law Amendment May Give Washington Infielders 60-Days More Play

By Shirley Povich

Post Staff Writer

Chicago, April 28.—The possibility that neither Cecil Travis nor Buddy Lewis would be called to Army service until mid-July is now seen by Washington club officials. A recent amendment to the Selective Service law has provided new hope that the two infielders would not be inducted into the Army within the next two weeks.

A new ruling by the Selective Service officials now provides for a 60-day extension to men in Class 1-A who have been labeled "available for immediate service," as has been Lewis and Travis. Extension will be given draftees who need time to "straighten out their affairs" before answering the Army call.

It is believed that both Lewis and Travis will ask for the 60-day extensions, pointing out that they need the earnings that period would bring them to provide for the support of their parents. Each player would earn approximately $1,000 a month for each of the two months' extension.

Not Yet Notified

Neither Travis nor Lewis have been notified when they are to report for Army duty. Within 10 days after that notification, they can make their appeals for extensions. In certain cases, two 60-day extensions may be given by draft board officials, it had been stated.

The decision on any application for extensions will rest with the players' local draft boards.

Manager Bucky Harris laid his troubles squarely before Owner Clark Griffith of the Nats, in Chicago today, and received the promise of some help.

Owner Griffith is in Chicago coincident with his trip this week to his old home at Bloomington, Ill., where he will unveil a plaque to the memory of Charles (Old Hoss) Radbourne, late great big league pitcher. Radbourne, like Griffith, was a native of Bloomington and was, in fact, Griffith's pitching mentor when the Nats' owner embarked on a big league career 53 years ago.

Plan Replacements

Neither Harris nor Griffith would divulge their plans for bringing new talent to the Nats, although they were in an afternoon-long session at the teams' hotel.

Harris' first request undoubtedly was for the infielders to replace Cecil Travis and Buddy Lewis, prospective military draftees, and it is believed that he asked Griffith to

Scott Kayoes Hogan in First Round at Arena

By Tony Neri

What was billed as the main event last night at Turner's Arena turned out to be just another fiasco as Buddy Scott floored Johnny Hogan, of New Haven, Conn., in the first heat of their scheduled 8-rounder to return the winner via the knockout route in 2 minutes, 10 seconds. A left to the jaw turned the trick.

A disappointing crowd of 600 was on hand to witness the initial round KO.

After sparring in the center of the ring, Scott hit his man with a pair of lefts and shortly after the end came. Referee Eddie LaFond tolled out the fatal ten.

Scott showed a much more potent punch in last night's fight than was evident in his past fights here.

A pair of middleweights held sway in the nightcap, the main event being put on before the intermission.

Middleweights Star

Al Franklin, Washington's slugging colored sensation, outpunched "Wild" Bill McDowell, the clowning Dallas, Tex., middleweight, in eight rounds, by way of actually headlining the card. The Washington boy had the Dallas battler down twice for the count, in the sixth and last rounds.

The texan tried to bully Franklin, but the colored boy kept coming in and hitting McDowell with both hands. The rough tactics of the fight seemed to please the fans after having watched the Scott-Hogan affair. Franklin built up an early lead and in the later rounds continued to punish McDowell with stinging rights.

It was Franklin's second straight victory in the District, a few weeks ago having beat El Brookman in a

Steve Sundra Proves Prize Package

Chicago, April 28.—The vagaries of big league baseball were never better illustrated than by the Washington pitching records to date. The man who, at the end of last season, might have ventured that both Dutch Leonard and Sid Hudson would lose their first three starts, and that the first Washington pitcher to win two games in 1941 would be Steve Sundra, would have been committed as a violent case.

POVICH

Leonard and Hudson were supposed to be the hot-shot pitchers of the Washington club, and Sundra wasn't even in the employ of the Nats. In fact, there was no suspicion that he would be in view of his record with the Yankees—21 victories and 11 defeats since leaving the minors. Sundra did not appear to be the sort of a pitcher that the Yankees would sell for cash, much less such moderate cash as $10,000.

But that is what happened, and now look what happened. Leonard and Hudson were charged with six of the Nats' first eight losses, and Sundra has won both of his starts in impressive fashion. He is, moreover, the only Washington pitcher to go the route in two games. That last victory of his, the 6-3 affair against the Yankees, was an especially sweet dish to the big Bohemian, because he was aware of the rumblings that preceded his sale by the Yanks.

It was said by the Yankees, and not too softly, that Sundra was a fair enough pitcher but that he lacked courage. There must be some mistake about that last, because in both of Sundra's victories for the Nats any sign of faint heartedness would have licked him. When he beat the Red Sox in Washington, they had the tying run on base in the ninth to no avail, and up at Yankee Stadium the other day Sundra was fit to be tied if the Yankees could stir up one more hit in the ninth. They couldn't.

Boasts Best Life-Time Average

If at any time, Joe McCarthy's pitching bogs down and he sees his pennant chances fading, it will be no comfort to him to reflect that he sold to Washington the pitcher who has the best winning percentage of any hurler in the big leagues. That's Sundra, whose two wins this season entitle him to show a record of 23 victories against only 11 defeats, for his big league career. That adds up to a .679 pitching percentage and even Bob Feller cannot match that record.

Sundra is no drawback, either, when he is up at the plate with a bat in his hand. He never has been. Joe McCarthy must have forgotten about that when he ordered Rick Ferrell purposely passed to fill the bases the other day and bring Sundra to the plate. Sundra singled home a run that proved a great comfort to him during that little unpleasantness in the ninth. The big fellow is a switch hitter, incidentally, but he gets most of his power when he is batting from the left side.

In the event that Leonard, Hudson and Chase do get squared away, Bucky Harris' pitching staff, with the addition of Sundra, may prove to be the best thing about the Washington club. And the Nats would deserve some sort of rating as a first-division contender, but the military draft has threatened to tear the very foundations from Harris' batting attack. The loss of Buddy Lewis and Cecil Travis will be irreparable, barring twin miracles.

It's a Pretty Sad Picture for Harris

What the Nats are going to do for runs after Lewis and Travis are measured for Army uniforms is plainly disturbing Harris. There isn't another batter in the line-up who deserves promotion to Lewis' fourth-place hitting role or even Travis' fifth-place job. The Nats are strictly slap hitters who get on base and are usually abandoned there unless Lewis or Travis fetch them home.

The only Washington hitter with the power befitting a clean-up man is Jimmy Bloodworth, and his long hits are far too infrequent. Bloodworth was able to maintain an average of only .245 last year and off that record he would be immensely flattered by being moved up to the important fourth or fifth place batting jobs.

Uncle Sam would be doing a pretty thorough wrecking job on the Nats if he takes Travis and Lewis into his army. Aside from the power the Nats cannot afford to lose, Harris would have left only a shell of his infield. The most plausible move, the shifting of Jimmy Bloodworth to third base and the induction of the veteran Buddy Myer into the line-up, has its drawbacks. Bloodworth could play third base well enough—as well if not better than Lewis, but Harris would be stripping the Washington infield of what has been its greatest charm—Bloodworth's ability to execute double plays at second base. For Harris, it's a pretty sad picture, and if you don't think he's worried, you haven't seen him lately.

Eddie Arcaro to Pilot Whirlaway in Derby

By Sid Feder

Associated Press Sports Writer.

Louisville, Ky., April 28.—The two old masters were back together again today and Whirlaway's stock in the Kentucky Derby market came out of its nose-dive.

This announcement that astute Eddie Arcaro and plain Ben Jones, the combination that put Lawrin across three years ago, were hooking up again on Warren Wright's little chestnut in Saturday's sixty-seventh running was the highlight of the first day of Derby week which also saw such developments as these:

1—A pretty-close-to-the-ground guess that a dozen colts, headed by Roy Martin's Our Boots and Charley Howard's Porter's Cap, would answer the starter "come on" Saturday.

2—A driving 2:06 2-5 workout for Rocky Palladina's Little Beans, the hope of the "other side of the railroad tracks," over the full mile and a quarter Derby route.

3—The arrival of Cleaveland Putnam's Swain, with Trainer Boots Durnell obviously "gambling on mud" for Derby day.

Eads Criticized

4—Nomination of seven horses for the running of the one-mile Derby Trial Stakes at the Downs tomorrow, with Whirlaway and Mrs. Vera Bragg's Blue Pair the only two regarded as likely Derby starters and with a strong possibility that Plain Ben will scratch his hope.

5—Definite word from Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons that the grizzled little sage of Sheepshead Bay won't be here this year. He's shipping his No. 1 and 2 hopes, King Cole and Bold Irishman, direct to Pimlico for the Preakness a week later.

Ever since the Bluegrass Stakes at Keeneland last Thursday, there has been some criticism of the way Wendell Eads piloted Whirlaway. Some said he shouldn't have let the colt, noted for his stretch-running ability, go to the front, that this was in some measure responsible for the fact Our Boots won by six lengths.

Plain Ben hasn't said a word against Eads' ride up to now, but it is obvious, with today's announcement, that he'll feel a little safer with Arcaro's experience in the saddle.

Little Beans All Out

There was some similarity between this late selection and the way Eddie got the leg up on Lawrin three years ago. He wasn't named until after the Derby trial that year, when Mrs. Payne Whitney, his contract employer, decided not to start her nominee Redbreast.

Many of the "experts" weren't too keen about Little Beans' work today, despite the good time. They pointed out that when Porter's Cap turned in his spectacular 2:04 4-5 trial yesterday, he did it without extending himself too much, but that Little Beans was all out and driving today. Other works during today's early morning hours saw Valdina Paul go a mile and eighth in 1:53 2-5 and Whirlaway a half in 0:48 3-5.

Mrs. Leo Walper Takes Half-Way Lead in Keefer Cup Golf

Mrs. Meckley, Mrs. Platt 2 Shots Back

Indian Spring Club Member's 82-5, 77 Is Low; Mrs. Brandon, Brownell Are Third

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

If the Keefer Cup Championship was a one-day affair Mrs. Leo Walper would have taken home both the low gross and net trophies after yesterday's round at Chevy Chase. She had a gross 82 minus five handicap strokes for a net 77.

As it is the Indian Spring player, District champion in 1939 and runner-up last year, holds a three-stroke lead over the net 80s of Mrs. Betty Meckley and Mrs. Landra Platt entering today's final round and a two-shot lead over the former for gross honors.

Mrs. Walper was out in 42 despite a pair of three-putt greens and returned in 40 strokes despite two bad holes, the fourteenth, where a ditch shot cost her a penalty stroke and the eighteenth, where she took three to get on and three more putts for a six. The leader's best effort was the fifteenth, where she spanked a long drive down the middle and then came within inches of holing a full four-wood shot, getting an easy birdie.

Mrs. Meckley Loses Touch

Mrs. Meckley, who dominated the Keefer Cup play last week and has won gross honors in this tournament several times, including last year, was the leader at the end of nine holes with a 41, but she lost her putting touch on the return trip and was guilty of four three-putters for an incoming 43 and 84. At that, she picked up two shots on Mrs. Walper with a par four on the eighteenth.

Mrs. Platt, a prominent host club representative, tied for second low net with an 88-8, 80, a shot ahead of Columbia's comparative newcomer to local tournaments, Mrs. T. O. Brandon, who had 86-5, 81, and Mrs. J. V. Brownell, Manor, a familiar name on the scoresheets several years ago, who posted a 95-14, 81.

Mrs. A. A. McEntee, Kenwood, reported putting trouble but stayed within five shots of the leader with a 93-11, 82, while seven others were deadlocked with net 83s, still given a chance to take down the big cup in today's final 18 holes.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

They're No Sissies!

New York, April 28.—Army training camps are not getting the flower of American youth, by a long shot. The real hemen of the country are going into New York City's trash collection service. The city's sanitation corps, which is under civil service, is our real No. 1 crack unit.

CONSIDINE

If any foreign power ever tries to invade us, and the boys from Camp Dix are mowed down, we should by all means call out our apple-cheeked, clear-eyed sanitation fusileers. They'll clean up on any totalitarian march on Times Square, assuming that anybody wants to defend Times Square.

The Army takes mammoth leftfielders with flat feet and 5-foot-tall blokes who have at least 12 teeth that meet. But you must be about 110 per cent all man to enlist in the trash troops. Only the cream of the species will suffice.

In December of 1939 the municipal civil service commission announced the first open competitive examination for super trash removers. Three weeks later 85,000 young New Yorkers, in the prime of their potential refuse removing life, had answered the call to arms. Then began a process of elimination which long since has indicated that the city's sanitation department has the toughest civil service examination on the books.

Miniature Gargantuas

It is certainly tougher than the examination whose successful passers are admitted to the State Department or the Bureau of Standards or any of the other intricate divisions of Uncle Sam's workshop. To become a New York garbage croupier a man must be a cross between F. P. A. and Gargantua, and combine the best features of both.

On mental tests alone, 24,314 of the 85,000 failed to make a passing mark. Doctors, discarding every man not fit to give superman a 15-round battle, belted the original total down to 24,940. The examiners okayed only those with 20-20 vision, perfect hearts, lungs, ears, legs, teeth and feet. Then the examiners really went to work.

All last summer the class A eligibles went through a training period which would have run Charles Atlas right out of the back of these pulp magazines. The 24,940 Franklin P. Gargantuas were put on a football player's diet and went through daily sieges of running, weight-lifting, broad-jumping, high jumping and calisthenics under the critical eye of Francis Patrick Wall, professor of psysical education at N. Y. U. Prof. Wall put them through paces never before asked of human bone and muscle and reflexes.

Here are some of the physical tests: Each candidate must lift a 120-pound ashcan over his head and deposit it gently and noiselessly(!) on a ledge 4½ feet above the ground. Then lift an 80-pound dumbbell in each hand. Then, with feet tied in one spot, the candidate must come up from a prone position with a 60-pound barbell behind his neck in 150 seconds.

Must Be Able to Elude Dogs

Apparently one of the examiners in these tests is a former A. A. U. official who has gone farther off his trolley than the others. For this part of the fabulous test of brain and brawn reads: "From a starting line a candidate must run 7 yards, make a broad jump of 8 feet 6 inches, continue running 10 yards, clear a hurdle of 3½ feet, continue running to a fence-trap involving two right-angle turns, continue running to a straight, flat board fence 8 feet high, which he must climb upon and descend from, continue running 5 yards to a vault box 4 feet 6 inches, which he must surmount, and thereafter run 5 yards to the finish line."

All this must be done in 11.5 seconds, and we wonder if that is fast enough to outfoot the snarling Great Dane who must be chasing the guy. If all this was not designed to escape a dog, then it must have been designed to outwit the irate taxpayer who, armed with a Louisville Slugger, lights out after the trash man who has awakened the taxpayer by playing a cymbal solo with the ashcan lids.

bruising encounter. McDowell weighed 150, and Franklin 151.

In the preliminaries, Billy Colbert, hard-hitting Houston schoolboy, punched out an eight-round verdict over Al Gilbert, of Washington. Colbert put on a whirlwind finish for the margin of victory. It was the Houston boy's second decision over the local light-heavyweight. Both fighters were cautious until the fifth, when they made up for the lack of earlier action by standing toe-to-toe and slugging. In the sixth round Colbert caught Gilbert with a right smash that jarred the Washington fighter. Gilbert weighed 165¼ and Colbert, 171.

Philadelphia's Joey Stack lost no time in taking the lead against Henry Hook in the second bout of the card, winning as he pleased. The Philadelphian, a 2-1 underdog, had Hook groggy in the fourth when he caught the "Hoosier Hotshot" with a looping left and the latter's knees buckled. Stack played upon Hook's body and the little Indian had no chance to get inside. The only shots he was able to land were wild-swinging rights and a left while taking a kangaroo jump at his opponent.

Stack took six of the eight rounds. The Philadelphian weighed 124½ and Hook, 125.

Referee Harry Volkman, recently back from Cuba where he was with the Marines under Maj. Heinie Miller, former secretary of the boxing commission, worked a pair of the bouts. It was his first appearance since last summer.

In the four-round opener, Tommy Hoover, of Washington, won a close decision over Divie Walker, of Atlanta, Ga. Hoover weighed 146 and Walker, 145¼.

Browns Waste Hits, Bow, 2-1, To White Sox

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, April 28.—The Browns displayed their potent batting power again today—and let it go at that as the Chicago White Sox took their third straight game of the series here, 2 to 1.

Consistently, since the season's start, the Browns have proven their ability to drive the ball to the far corners of the lot, but rarely have those hits materialized into runs. Today Manager Haney's charges collected 11 safeties, three of them for extra bases, but the White Sox with their seven blows brought home the winning run.

White Sox Pitcher Jack Hallett, in winning his first major league victory this season, caused the Browns to drop their fourth straight game by one run.

Eagles Beat Terrors, 10 to 6, For 3d in Row

Harry Newby hurled the second game of his life yesterday and walked off the mound with a 1000 percentage as American University defeated Western Maryland, 10-6, on the Eagles' diamond. Newby won his first start for the Eagles last week.

Newby, until last week, a very good catcher and outfielder, turned back the Western Marylanders with nine hits and contributed largely to his own victory with some timely hitting. He kept the nine blows fairly well scattered, and save for one big inning—the sixth—he was in very little trouble.

The Eagles gave Newby strong support and came through with a big eighth-inning splurge to pull him out of trouble. In this inning, they banged home five runs to sew up things.

The victory was the Eagles' third straight. They play Randolph-Macon this afternoon at 2:30 at American University.

Vigh Spars Alone for Uline Bout—Partners 'Stand in Bed'

Steve Mamakos Drills in Earnest With Brookman for Scrap Tomorrow

Sparring partners were conspicuous by their absence yesterday at the Uline Ice Arena as Ernie Vigh, hard-hitting Newburgh, N. Y., battler, made ready to work out in preparation for his engagement with Washington's Steve Mamakos in the main attraction of tomorrow night's card at the $700,000 sports palace. The bout is set for 10 rounds.

Since the 21-year-old knockout artist fractured Larry Anzalone's jaw in a drill last Saturday, Handler Harry Crispi has been unable to get anyone to work with him. Two local boys were supposed to have trained with the New York Hungarian yesterday but neither showed up.

Crispi took his boy over to Huron gym and the latter breezed through a light drill of hitting the bag and shadow boxing.

Meanwhile, Manager Matt Twomey had Mamakos go three 4-minute rounds against Washington's El Brookman. It was billed as a workout, but from the opening signal from Twomey the fighters went to it hammer-and-tongs. Not once in the 12 fast and furious minutes did the pair let up.

Mamakos, a picture of superb health, showed a harder punch and in the infighting, just kept boring in. Brookman will meet Frankie Wills in a six-rounder tomorrow night.

The winner of the Mamakos-Vigh show will probably meet Tony Zale in a big outdoor show here this summer. Promoter Alvis received a wire from Sam Pian, manager of Zale, from Chicago yesterday, stating that he (Pian) would get in touch with Alvis after the fight here tomorrow. Zale against either Mamakos or Vigh here would be a feather in the hat of Alvis as New York and Chicago having been trying to land a fight like this for some time. Zale holds two decisions over Mamakos, but in their last fight,

Joe Louis Plans Local Training For Baer Bout

Word from Hot Springs, Ark., where Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis is vacationing prior to coming here to prepare for his fight against Buddy Baer May 23 at Griffith Stadium, has the champion arriving here next week to begin drills. He is expected to train at Riverside Stadium.

This may conflict with the walkathon which is currently running, but plans will be made to run both at the same time. Irregardless, Louis' camp will be given the preference.

Tomorrow night Baer will be at the ringside of the Vigh-Mamakos fight at Uline Arena, scene of his victory over Galento.

Lewis, Stirling Are Favored In Team Play

Reeve Lewis and W. C. Stirling, lowest handicapped and one of the favored teams in the French High Commission Cup tournament at Chevy Chase, will meet T. P. Ansberry and F. W. Coleman in the first round of match play this week.

Other first round matches will pit J. P. Lanson and Don Deveau against Landra Platt and Walter White; W. G. Brantley and R. C. Ransdell vs. George C. Werner and R. W. Miller, and J. B. Patterson and P. C. Ridsdale against J. M. Childress and W. G. Emory, jr.

Elwood Poore, who has handled the assistant pro duties at Chevy Chase since last fall, leaves this morning for his own club near Scranton, Pa., which opens May 1.

Wherever Key Men Meet

You see the pictures of key men in your newspaper... you hear their speeches over the radio. They're the 'dollar a year' men whose business it is to know what's best.

And they know what's best in smoking pleasure, too—that's why when the time comes for them to relax with a good cigar, they turn to Robt. Burns. They find in the 100% slow-cured all-Havana filler, the expert craftsmanship, and in the handsome well-styled appearance a superlative contentment—a kind of smoking luxury that many a smoker wonders is possible at a dime.

Sassy Lady Captures Baltimore Spring 'Cap at Pimlico

$18.90 Shot Beats Out Cherry Jam

Favored Impound Runs Third; Record Set in Steeplechase By Chaloner, $15.80

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Pimlico, Md., April 28.—Sassy Lady, the only gal in a field of eight sprinters, talked back to her masculine company with four flying hoofs here today and ran off with the seventh running of the $2,500 added Baltimore Spring Handicap. The 5-year-old mare, bought by Mrs. C. E. Nelson, of Seat Pleasant, Md., for $8,500 at a Florida sale, ran her brilliant race to the tune of an $18.90 mutuel. She staved off several challenges and came into the wire a half length in front of the Greentree Stable's Cherry Jam.

Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt's Impound, making his first start since his Santa Anita campaigning, was installed a slight favorite and was third in the sprint field after making a bold bid on the outside. Among the disappointers in the field were Jay Jay, Howard Bruce's ace, and E. K. Bryson's Clyde Tolson. Jay Jay set and forced the pace early before fading and Clyde Tolson failed to get up more than a gallop.

Sassy Lady was ridden by Jockey Sterling Young and he kept booting her all the way. She had a slight tussle in getting rid of Jay Jay at the beginning of the swing to the stretch and she turned back Cherry Jam's repeated challenges. With 50 yards to go she wrote success on her effort in capital letters by drawing out.

Pimlico's gold rush meeting of 12 days opened in fine style. Customers reported to the number of 10,000 and wagering was brisk. Favorite players, however, had their troubles, the majority of the day's public choices finishing "up the race track."

The secondary features, the Pimlico Spring Maiden Steeplechase, was a sorry affair as far as competition was concerned, but it did produce a new track record for the two-mile jumping layout. E. B. Schley's Chaloner, a $45.80 shot, was the winner, and the gelding was clocked in 3:51 2-5. The former record of 3:52 1-5 was shared by Saluda and Broadside King.

There were so many spills in the race that it appeared at one stage that somebody was using a machine gun. Six of the 14 starters went out of competition through falls or lost jockeys. At the finish, the field was strung out all over the track. About the closest thing was the margin between Chaloner, ridden by Jockey J. Penrod, and the favored Lechlade. This was three and a half lengths. Third money went to the Greton Stable's Amalfi, 25 lengths from second position. Lechlade stumbled repeatedly while landing and might have been the winner with better fencing form.

MEADOW FUN was held safe throughout after being off slowly. HALCYONA was off slowly, bolted to outside fence and raced greenly, closing some ground.

ROUGH BRIGADE, off in first flight, overtook NIGHT TIDE at far turn, drew clear, but had to be kept to pressure to hold latter safe in closing stages. NIGHT TIDE forced to front early, set and forced pace and was weakening at close. SHOWABAL, shut off repeatedly and forced to be taken up, closed a sag in bold fashion. BLABLAH was in thick of forward contention early and dropped back. NICK raced in dull fashion under listless handling.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:50. Off at once. Winner, Mrs. H. S. Horkheimer's br. m. (7), Questionnaire—Autumnal. Trained by J. B. Bond. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. TIME, 1:47⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—AUTUMNQUEST, $10.90, $5.20, $3.20; DNIEPER, $3.90, $2.50; HAREBELL, $2.80.

AUTUMNQUEST, off in tangle, moved to contention on outside, took command in straightaway and barely lasted. DNIEPER, bothered and forced to be taken up, entering backstretch, came wide for racing room and closed with bold rush. HAREBELL was steadied going to first turn, drifted to inside along backstretch, responded gamely to pressure, but lacked racing room between winner and rail in final sixteenth. BRIGHT REBEL, badly outrun for three quarters, closed with terrific rush.

Selections at Pimlico

Dear Al:

The Maryland Jockey Club's two biggest races, the Preakness Stakes and the Dixie Handicap, were both thrust into the Nation's spotlight as the most important sports attractions of the spring. The Preakness has gathered prestige with the news that King Cole, Curious Coin and Bold Irishman would be pointed for the Maryland Jockey Club classic exclusively. In addition a half dozen other good 3-year-olds are expected to remain in the East and make their bids for fame in the Preakness on May 10. Among these are Attention, Ocean Blue, Monday Lunch, Cavalier, Overdrawn and High Command. Some of these are expected to have their final Preakness trials in the Survivor Stakes at Pimlico on May 6. Bold Irishman, due at Pimlico on Wednesday, appears to be a certain starter in the Survivor. The biggest news about the Dixie was the letter Racing Secretary Charles McLennan had from Andrew Jackson Joyner, impressario of the racing fortunes of George D. Widener. Joyner advised that Eight Thirty, one of the finest handicap horses seen in years, will be sent to Pimlico late this week to keep his engagement in the Dixie on May 7. Along with Eight Thirty will come Mrs. George D. Widener's Your Chance, also for the Dixie. Your Chance last year was one of the finest 3-year-olds. In his first start in 1940 he won the Survivor and was second to Bimelech in the Belmont Stakes. The decision to run Eight Thirty in the Dixie will bring together the two best older horses in training since Tom Smith announced several weeks ago that Charles S. Howard's Mioland would be a certain starter in the Dixie. Another candidate arrived yesterday when Belair Stud's Fenelon was placed in stall No. 24 in Trainer Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons' barn at the old Pimlico race course. Level Best, champion 2-year-old filly of last season and a leading candidate for Saturday's running of the $10,000 Pimlico Oaks, was given a useful trial in preparation for the mile and a sixteenth event. Under the direction of Trainer J. P. Jones, the Crispin Oglebay star reeled off 8 furlongs in 1:40 3-5. The chestnut daughter of Equipoise and the Man o' War mare, Speed Boat, stepped the first half mile in 0:47 2-5 and the three-quarters in 1:13 2-5. She was tired at the end, but that was expected as she heretofore had not undertaken such a long trial. Jockey Freddie A. Smith arrived from Keeneland to ride during the meeting.

See you on the rail. BILL.

First race—WIRE ME had enough trouble for six horses in that last outing. Should he obtain clear sailing today, this one is going to be a mighty tough horse to beat. STOP LOSS turned in a good last and is dangerous. SAXON PRINCESS showed speed at Havre de Grace and is a possibility.

Second race—TOWER GUEST breaks off the rail, but has the speed to make the most of that position. BRIGHT FINISH has been close consistently and should go well in this maiden company. PARABOLOID is from the Brann barn and may come up a good thing.

Third race—BROADSIDE KING likes this jumping course and has seen action at the hunts. May carry the top weight of the field to victory. BUCK LANGHORNE has turned into a fair timber topper and belongs close. BAHAMA KNIGHT is said to be a good one.

Fourth race—CHARLENE'S last was miserable, due mainly to being pulled up after breaking in a tangle. The small field probably will make this a true race and I'm going to string along. POMIVA is the one to beat. PANDONNA for the minor award.

Fifth race—KANSAS is the class of this field and needs only to run his best race. Carries the top assignment of 117 pounds, but is fit enough to give weight to this kind. TRAGIC ENDING has plenty of stretch punch and will be a serious factor. ICE WATER is likely to improve with the change of tracks.

Sixth race—OCEAN BLUE probably needed that Havre de Grace outing for conditioning purposes. Has worked well since and appears to be the right one in the day's feature. SOBRIQUET turned back the top one when last they met and has a fair running mate in SKY LANE. PETE JR. is at tops and it would not surprise me if he took it all.

Seventh race—TRYSTATE appears to have an edge on the company gathered for this distance affair. Likes the track and I see no reason for mistakes. SUN CAPTURE was practically left at the post at the other track and is dangerous. LOVE MARK must be better than that miserable last.

Eighth race—MISRULE was caught in a jam going to the first turn last out. She is as fit as hands make horses and gets in this light enough to deserve the top ranking. FLAMING HIGH has the weight piled on, but is due respect. ABBASSIDE'S last was a fine effort.

Best bet—KANSAS.

GAO Clips Center Market, 3-2, in Departmental Opener

Raffterry Gives 4 Hits But Loses

Defending Champs Score Two Runs In Sixth Inning To Decide Game

General Accounting Office, last year's titlist in the Departmental Baseball League, indicated it has designs on another crown yesterday when it scored two runs in the sixth inning to nose out Center Market, 3-2, in the inaugural clash of the season.

The game on the Ellipse was given an official christening by Tom McNamara, personnel director of the GAO, who threw out the first ball.

Four-hit pitching by Bob Rafterry, of the Market, was wasted in the sixth inning when G. A. O. knocked him from the mound with its winning runs. Roberts, who relieved him, hurled hitless ball until the end of the seven-inning fray.

Les Hoff, GAO's starting pitcher, suffered the same fate as Rafftery in the third when he was chased in favor of Titcomb. Between them they gave the losers six safeties, including Stataler's triple.

Today's departmental schedule calls for a meeting of Panama Canal and the Arlington Maccabees on No. 2 Monument Grounds at 4 p. m.

Fishing with JACK BELL

The time for the anglers' annual campfire is fast approaching. And, here are the details:

The dates: May 2, 3, and 4. The place: Catoctin Recreational Demonstration Area near Thurmont, Md. The cost: a $5 bill.

JACK BELL

Everything is furnished for your comfort except bed covers. Bring your own blankets, or better still, your sleeping bag. Of course bring your own trouting equipment.

The program will begin Friday afternoon with registration during the afternoon and evening. Fishing, committee meetings and dinner Friday evening will get the weekend's festivities off to a big start.

Saturday—fishing during the day; big campfire in the evening with election of officers and redramatization of the Brotherhood Creed. Sunday—memorial exercises in morning for Ozark Ripley and Paul Townsend; fish king thereafter; dinner from noon to 2 p. m. then farewells.

Looks as if the boys are coming from all over. Col. Theodore Roosevelt, Van Campen Heilner, Dan Holland, Ray Camp among others are coming down from New York.

A large party is heading down from Pennsylvania and Delaware, not to mention the Ohio, Virginia and North Carolina crowd that has made advance reservations. Dr. Ira Gabrielson, Charlie Jackson and Glenn Leach will be among those heading Catoctin way from Washington.

The creed of the Brotherhood of the Jungle Cocks briefly calls upon all true sportsmen to take less than the law allows and never more than the stream can afford when they go trouting. There's more to it than that, for each member pledges to teach a boy the rudiments of fishing and sportsmanship every year.

Stream conditions in Maryland on Big Hunting Creek, Little Hunting, and Fishing Creek were poor last weekend. All streams were low. The water in Big Hunting Creek was not clear and trout were scarce. Fishing Creek was clear and low, plenty of trout in the pools, but there also, few trout were caught Sunday. Even the worm dunkers could not do anything with them.

I. B. Clark, of Front Royal, Va., caught a 20-inch rainbow in Virginia. It is rumored that a fisherman up Front Royal way caught a 6¼-pound rainbow.

Here we are in the middle of "Fishermens Week," celebrated throughout the Nation April 26-May 3. The highlight will be tomorrow morning at 10:30, when President Roosevelt, No. 1 fisherman of the Nation, will be presented with a complete salt-water fishing outfit. The presentation will be made by Jack Stowell, president of the local chapter of "Waltonians."

Alexandria Waltonians and interested sportsmen had a meeting Thursday and are trying to organize a new chapter of the Izaak Walton League. Sportsmen interested should contact Jay C. Reed of Alexandria.

We have not received any favorable reports as yet as to where hard heads may be biting. The nor'east wind blowing over the weekend does not help maters any.

Fishing on Middle Creek in Maryland, last season I had an interesting experience, which is worth passing along. Just ahead of me on the stream I saw a fisherman in trouble. He had his fly and leader fast in a branch, high overhead. I worked my way up to him just as he started to climb the tree. "Say," I said, "what are you doing, fishing for squirrels?" "No," he answered, "But I've lost four flys and the best part of two leaders account of this ——wind today. I just can't afford to lose that fly, as it is my last one like it, and I am having plenty of sport with it."

So I asked him to wait a moment and produced my fly retriever, which is nothing but a piece of lead and 20" of hard twisted 100-pound test fishing line, tied to it. I uncoiled the line and chucked the piece of lead over the limb caught both ends, pulled, and down came the limb within reach and I retrieved his fly and leader. I let go of the limb and line end and up went the limb, down came my retriever line.

My new found fishing friend said, "Well I'll be damned—simple as all that and me losing my patience along with about $5 in fishing tackle every season."

Better make one up for yourself it sure is handy, study the illustration.

Nats Assured Of New Talent

redouble his efforts to obtain Frankie Crosetti from the Yankees.

Barter for Crosetti

While the Nats were in New York, Griffith made another attempt to buy Crosetti from the Yankees as an infield replacement, but was turned down by General Manager Ed Barrows. However, negotiations are not closed, it is believed.

Harris did not admit that he asked his boss to buy or trade for another outfielder, but that he did is rather obvious. Ben Chapman has been in a damaging hitting slump, and despite the frequent hits of George Case and Roger Cramer, the Nats' outfield lacks power and there is none on the bench.

As for his pitching, Harris did not complain to Griffith about that. He said that he still had faith in his pitching staff despite the defeats of Leonard and Hudson, and that he was gratified by Steve Sundra's showing. "Pitching is not one of my worries,' 'said the Nats' manager. "I want some infielders and some more power at the plate."

Central High Nine Upsets Generals, 8-3

With a pair of first-year pitchers checking in excellent work, Central High nine surprised even its coach yesterday when it trampled the potent forces of Washington-Lee, 8-3, on the Arlington School's diamond.

Held to a single hit in the first four frames as big Ed Johnson hurled flawless ball, the Vikings finally found the batting range in the fifth. They plowed out of a 2-0 deficit with a 4-run splurge, chasing Johnson to the showers. Before the battle was over they had W.-L. sending in a new moundsman after almost every pitch.

Central Out-hit

Manuel Avancena tosed the first three innings for the Vikings, giving up 5 safeties and 2 of the Little General's runs in the thrid. Tall Dave Wilkerson took over then and after a shaky start allowed only 5 hits the remainder of the game. Meanwhile Central sluggers were being out-hit, 10-8, but they contrived to get their blows when they were most needed.

Four of them came in the big fifth inning eruption. Outfielder Wolfe started off by beating out a grounder to short and Fuoco sent him to third with a single to center. At that point Wilkerson, just in the game, cleaned the paths with a triple to deep right field. Sapourn was walked by Johnson, putting two on again, and Lagos repeated Wilkerson's performance. His three-bagger was the best hit of the day, far into left. Doswell Olsen, then relieved Johnson of his pitching duties and Central of its turn at bat by forcing Di Blasi to ground out.

Sherman Strikes Out

Olson lasted until he was lifted for a pinch hitter in the eighth, with the bases loaded, but his substitute, Sherman, struck out ingloriously. San Bowbeer got a turn on the hill for W.-L. then, but he quickly packed the bases with two walks and a hit batsman, and Rube McNab was rushed in from left field as a last resort. He tossed a two-run single to Lagos and Citrenbaum scored on Di Blasi's long fly, but the scoring ended there.

Elliott Hurls St. Albans to Third Victory

Pitcher Earle Elliott's three-hit effort evened St. Albans School's baseball record for the season at three won and three lost yesterday, stifling a Friends School rally for a 5-to-2 victory on the home lot.

The winners tallied two runs in the first inning, one in the third and two more in the fifth, to successfully nullify Friends' two-run spree in the sixth. The game was called in the seventh inning.

Delos Smith gave the hosts six safeties, including a triple by Bill Terry in the third and a double by Buddy Cromelin in the sixth. Hurler Smith accounted for the losers' only extra base blow, a triple with one mate on base in the sixth.

Washington Show Plans Are Completed

Final plans for the Washington Horse Show were completed by the board of directors yesterday at the Meadowbrook Saddle Club, where the event will be held May 16, 17 and 18.

Headed by H. Rozier Dulany, jr., president, and Deborah Rood, widely known Wilmington (Del.) horsewoman and managing director of the show, the meeting went ahead at a rapid pace as last-minute details were ironed out concerning grounds, stabling, entries and entertainment for the 80 or more exhibitors who are expected to make upward of 600 entries.

Miss Rood announced that George Elliott, of Toronto, Cadada, is unable to accept Washington's invitation to judge hunters because military affairs prevent his absence from his country. Col. E. N. Hardy, invited to judge military classes, also told the committee that he cannot officiate.

Only prize list change is the replacement of the Good Hands Class, hitherto sponsored by the A. S. P. C. A., with an event for children's horsemanship at a walk, trot and canter, as the former competition has been discontinued by its sponsors.

Challenge trophies for important classes include the National Capital Trophy, presented each year to the winner of the model hunters, which went to Mr. and Mrs. George Watts Hill's brown gelding, Balkonian, in 1940; the Gwinn Wheelwright Rust Memorial Challenge Trophy, offered to the owner of the winning hunt team, which was taken last year by Mr. and Mrs. Hill's entry; the Admiral Cary T. Grayson Memorial, for registered thoroughbred hunters, won a year ago by Mr. and Mrs. W. Haggin Perry's Demopolis; the Peter Voorhees de Graw Memorial, for local hunters, and the big Challenge Bowl, in honor of Victorian II, Mr. and Mrs. George P. Greenhalgh's sensational jumping pony which died last week.

2 New Leaders Take Over in City Pin Meet

Two new leaders moved up as the second week of the Washington City Duckpin Association's annual tournament got under way last night at Lucky Strike Alleys. Bill Tarver, of RFC, took over first place in Class F with a 348 count. In the teams, the Agriculture quintet from the Men's Federal League posted a new high of 1,753 in Class B, paced by Harry Dixon's 364.

Jim Justice moved among the Class C leaders with a fourth-place score of 358.

The No. 1 and No. 2 teams of the FBI scored in that order in the Class C team play, the former posting a 1,678 score led by Bill Miller's 382 and Bill Poole's 151 game. The No. 2 team rolled a total of 1,661, good for fifth place. Jim Guthrie was high with 143-383.

Barry Pague's 356 was the leading effort of the Beachcombers, whose 1,597 score ousted the third-place holder in Class D.

RECREATION

It was a Donaldson night at Brookland Recreation in the Odd Fellows League, but Bert Cowell, Brightwood, stole the show when he rolled close to a perfect flat game, finally finishing with 98 and taking the record of 96 away from Perce Ellett, official scorer for the league. Frank Donaldson rolled 141 for top game and Wally Donaldson took high set honors with his 391, both scores enabling their Amity No. 1 team to win highs after pinfalls of 609 and 1,537. Proving there is something in a name, the Golden Rule boys have locked up the flag with one more night of play.

CONVENTION HALL

The Convention Hall League race continues at a hot pace with any one of the three leaders given a chance at the flag. C. H. Wolfe & Son enters a one-game lead over Tru-Blu and Geo. W. Cochran, who are tied for second place, and last night all three leaders scored sweeps over Washington Shade & Awning, Sport Center and Modern Way Movers, respectively. Jack Rabbit's 146—381 sparked the victory for his C. H. Wolfe quintet, while Eddie Rees' 388 high set following a 136 game led the Cochran boys. Carl Deaver's 139—364 enabled the Tru-Blu team to win. The last meeting is scheduled for Saturday.

A SPECIAL MATCH

The Arlington Bowling Center Aceties totaled 1,313 to 1,497 for the Clarendon Cometies last night in a special match at Eddie Goldberg's nearby Virginia drives. Kitty Helms had highs for the winners with 314—328. In the doubles, the duo of Kitty Helms-Virginia Wright scored 599 to best the Clarendon team of Kitty Smith and John Bransford by two sticks. Kitty Helms continued her fine bowling to take the singles event from Kitty Smith, 309 to 292.

ARROW CAR LEAGUE

The Arrow Car League at Northeast Temple saw McClanahan and DeMier, both of the Mayflower quintet, take individual honors for the night, the former scoring 132 for game, while the latter's 358 took the set honors, both scores helping their mates to high team set of 1,554 and a sweep over the Mayflair boys.

Tech-Central Game Features Diamond Card

Confident that a victory will put it well on the way to its first interhigh baseball title since 1933, Tech's High nine today engages Central's rollicking diamonders in the feature of a two-game public school at the McKinley field. In the other, Eastern, runner-up in 1940, invades Wilson's Stadium seeking to improve its favoritism in the annual series.

The crucial Tech-Central clash will find the Manual Trainer's Buddy Webb, called the outstanding schoolboy hurler in the city, against a rank newcomer, Harry Wolfe.

Webb, stellar pitcher with the Trainers last year, will be favored, though little is known of his opponent's ability. In announcing his decision to pitch Wolfe, Coach Jack Ray, of Central, revealed that he has jealously saved the youngster until this important game. According to Ray he has control and considerable speed.

At the plate Central may have the edge. Its trio of Zello Lagos, Sam Di Blasi and Bob Hill promises to develop as the most devastating

Stott Assured Chairmanship Of Big Board

New York, April 28.—Robert L. Stott was assured today of election as chairman of the New York Stock Exchange, and with him a slate of 12 other governors of the Nation's principal securities market.

Stott, square, forceful, a native of Brooklyn, became a sure thing for the job, as did the other governors, when the deadline passed for nominations of opposition candidates, with no names offered.

The new slate will join present governors on May 19. Stott succeeds Charles B. Harding in the unpaid job of chairman, in which he acts as the liaison officer between the 1,300 members and the professional staff of the exchange. The latter is headed by the president, an office now vacant following departure recently of William McChesney Martin, jr., to join the draft army.

The new governors are being invited to sit informally with the present board even before inauguration as the governing body seeks Martin's successor and considers "valedictory" suggestions made by the latter for a "streamlining" of the exchange's machinery to combat the present low volume of business.

Texas to Be Site Of New Zinc Plant

New York, April 28 (AP).—American Smelting & Refining Co., announced today it had completed negotiations for establishment of an electrolytic zinc refining plant at Corpus Christi, Tex., to cost $5,200,000.

The plant, to be financed by the company and to be completed in about 18 months, will sell the first 50,000 tons of refined zinc produced to the Metals Reserve Corporation, Federal agency which collects stores of strategic metals. At the expected capacity of about 2,000 tons a month for the new operation, this order is about two years' output.

Virginia Bankers Hear Thomson

Addressing the Piedmont Clearing House Association at Madison, Va., recently, Eliot H. Thomson, of the Washington Loan & Trust Co., emphasized the value of educational advertising and all publicity that informed the general public about the activities and operations of the officials of the institutions.

Many banks, he said, are now conducting meetings of their staffs to fit them better for their contacts with people in and out of their own institutions. Public relations, to accomplish the result desired, must be a continuing part of bank management, he contended. Giles H. Miller, jr., cashier, Culpeper National Bank, was in charge of the program.

Bank Resources Rise

Resources of the 22 insured commercial banks in the District of Columbia totaled $470,810,000 on December 31, 1940, according to a survey made public yesterday by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

Deposits in the insured banks were listed as $419,703,000. Demand deposits of the latest call date amounted to $299,577,000 and time deposits totaled $120,126,000.

Loans and discounts of the reporting banks amounted to $128,175,000, in increase of $15,733,000 over the December 31, 1939, total.

Direct and guaranteed obligations of the United States Government listed by the District of Columbia banks amounted to $112,437,000 on December 31, 1940. Other securities totaled $23,951,000.

Loans and discounts of the 13,438 insured commercial banks throughout the country totaled $18,397,775,000, an increase of $1,531,754,000, or more than 9 per cent over the amount reported December 31, 1939, deposits increased from the $56,076,349,000 reported the previous year to $63,469,603,000, the highest figure since inauguration of deposit insurance.

Advertising Gains 3.3 Per Cent

Newspaper advertising placed by retailers in 83 major cities during the week ended April 19 totaled 22,197,181 lines, up 3.3 per cent from the corresponding week of last year, when 21,486,815 lines were carried, according to Advertising Age.

For the year to date, retail advertising volume in the 83 reporting cities has totaled 315,671,433 lines, an increase of 3.6 per cent over the 304,574,946 lines carried during the same period in 1940.

A. & P. Shortens Hours Of Eastern Workers

New York, April 28 (AP).—John A. Hartford, president of the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., announced today 7,000 employes of the company's Eastern division—New York City and vicinity—would work a five-day week beginning May 12.

William M. Byrnes, division president, said the company would pay the same salaries as for the present six-day, 54-hour week. Byrnes said it was the third reduction in working hours since 1916, when A. & P. employes worked a six-day, 65-hour week.

Hartford's announcement said success of the reduction in the Eastern division would lead to extension to A. & P. stores throughout the United States.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, April 28 (AP).—Wheat prices pushed upward 1½ cents a bushel today after a hesitant start, but reacted later.

The market was a quiet affair at the opening. There was no foreign news of consequence, crop news was as expected with good weather prevailing over most of the wheat belt, and the chief interest centered in several agricultural programs bills scheduled for hearing by House committees in Congress this week and in the proposed new taxes.

Wheat closed ⅝@1¼ cent higher than Saturday's finish, May, 91¾@91⅝; July, 89¼@89⅜. Corn, ⅛@⅜ up; May, 68½@68⅝; July, 68¾; oats, ⅛@¼ higher, and lard, 5@10 cents down.

The bulge in wheat came after a sharp rally in sorbeans which carried the May contract to 1.24½, equalling the highest price paid for this delivery this season. The market was thin, however, and beyond stimulating wheat had little real appreciable effect. After wheat started rising, though, some stop loss selling was in evidence, and some selling of loan wheat in store was reported.

Pivotal Issues Edge Higher in Dull Deals; U. S. Steel, Bethlehem Prominent on Upside

New York, April 28.—Leading stocks shook off pessimistic news items in today's market and posted recoveries of fractions to more than a point. The list was a bit shaky until the final hour when buying of steels, aircrafts and specialties turned the tide moderately in favor of the bulls. At that, many issues were in arrears at the close.

The Associated Press average of the revival, however, transfers of 60 stocks was up .1 of a point at 39.5. Volume dropped sharply on 310,810 shares being the smallest for a full session since March 5. They compared with 424,900 Friday.

Steels forged forward at the last after this week's mill operations had officially been placed at a decline of 1.7 points from the week before. The recession, due almost entirely to fuel shortage, was much less than most had expected.

Continuance of the soft coal mining deadlock, affecting steel producers and many other important defense industries, was seen as the principal market handicap. Withdrawal of the allies in Greece, while pretty well discounted as a price factor, left a bad taste in financial quarters. Inroads of mounting taxes on many corporations, as disclosed in a botch af earnings statements, also evoked little cheering in boardrooms.

Much of the day's bidding, at the same time, was attributed to the belief that recent Nazi victories were a long way from deciding the war. Business prospects, including rising spending and soaring backlogs for aircraft manufacturers and shipbuilders, were helpful to sentiment.

Prominent stocks on the upside were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Douglas Aircraft, Sperry, Curtiss-Wright "A," Bendix, Air Reduction, Union Carbide, General Steel Castings preferred, Loft, Santa Fe, Atlantic Coast Line, Montgomery Ward and Consolidated Edison.

Chrysler was unchanged and General Motors down ⅛. Others in arrears were Standard Oil of N. J., Goodyear, Woolworth, N. Y. Central, Allied Chemical, Kennicott and Johns-Manville.

Rail loans and U. S. Governments emerged with fair-sized advances in the bond department. Commodities steadied. Wheat at Chicago was up ¾ to 1¼ cents a bushel. Cotton was uncharged to up 5 cents a bale.

In the Curb modest improvement was registered for Gulf Oil, American Cyanamid "B," American Gas, Brewster Aero and Lake Shore. In the losing division were Republic Aviation, Pittsburgh Plate Glass, Creole Petroleum and Pennroad. Turnover here was around 54,000 shares versus 58,000 in the previous full session.

Corporate Earnings Reports

By the Associated Press

Soconoy-Vacuum Oil Co., Inc., reported yesterday net earnings of $36,409,055 for 1940, equivalent to $1.17 per share, which compared with $34,452,710, or $1.10 per share, for 1939.

The war in Europe prevented normal reports from the company's foreign operations, President John A. Brown said, adding that $75,000,000 of earned surplus had been reserved "for possible losses which may or may not be realized in the foreign position."

Of that amount, $16,000,000 was assigned to investment in and advances to Colombian Petroleum Co. and South American Gulf Oil Co. operating in Colombia, now carried as $6,501,414 after write-off of $3,700,000 losses in 1940.

Rails, Utilities Lead Upturn In Bond List

By the Associated Press

New York, April 28.—Rails moved ahead again today, carrying most of the bond market higher by fractions. Utilities shared widely in the lifting motion, and even the foreign list ended the day with gains.

Transactions totaled $8,215,450, face value, compared with $8,059,400 Friday.

U. S. Governments gained 1-32 to 3-32 in the over-the-counter market. Trading was brisk during the morning but operated at reduced speed later ni the day. The new taxable 2½s ended at 103-30-32, up 3-32 point. In the Stock Exchange, prices of the Federals merely came into line with the outside dealings, although the final list showed the range 13-32 higher to 1-32 lower.

A decision of the Supreme Court of the United States preventing a boost to 10 cents of the present 8-cent fare of the Hudson & Manhattan R. R. was reflected immediately by a one point drop in the road's adjustment 5s.

On the rising side, gaining a point or more, were Otis Steel 4½s at 80½; St. Paul & Kansas City Short Line 4½s at 9⅞; Western Pacific first 5s of '46 at 46¾; Marion Steam Shovel stamped 6s of '47 at 94¼; and Central Pacific 5s at 55⅝.

Chief advancers among the foreign issues were those of Australia, Brazil, Canada, Colombia and Japan. German and Italian loans declined.

Building Material Sales Estimated At 10-Year High

New York, April 28 (AP).—The Wall Street Journal said today sales of building materials have shown a sharp upturn in the past four weeks, and that April sales of leading manufacturers would be the best for that month in a decade, and for some, the best on record.

Private and defense housing are accounting for most of the increase, the paper said. It pointed out houses insured by the Federal Housing Administration were started at the rate of 4,443 in the week ended April 12, and "were rapidly approaching 5,000 units a week." Last year's peak of FHA housing was 4,125 units, and was not reached until mid-May.

"With manufacturing costs showing a steady increase since the first of the year," the paper said, "there is a growing feeling among manufacturers that the industry is faced with the necessity of advancing prices for certain materials. It is felt that it will be able to justify such increase with the administration's price agencies."

Not too many years ago they may have called it "ragtime," and today they may call it "swing." But, somehow or other, it's to be suspected that in essence they're pretty much the same thing under the drum skin.

At any rate you'll be given a rare chance to compare them tonight on the "We the People" program to be heard over WJSV at 8. One of the guests is to be Blanche Ring, who quickened pulses some time back when she sang such songs as "Waltz Me Around Again, Willie." Another is to be Dinah Shore, the leading exponent of modern swing songs and certainly no piker when it comes to putting pulses on the upbeat herself.

The two are to sing some hit samples from their respective eras, compare their methods on "selling" songs and let you draw your own conclusions. It should be a very pleasant mode of education.

Other guests on the program devoted to human interest stories include Wallace Caswell, jr., who makes a living wrestling with sharks, and Helen Hiett, a girl reporter, who's just returned from a visit to Spain and Gibraltar.

"The Court of Missing Heirs" is to present another heiress as its guest tonight. An eccentric fellow left his entire fortune to a "Miss Babe," whom he'd seen in a vaudeville act once. Oddly enough, there were something like 250 claimants, each maintaining she was THE "Miss Babe." But this is to be THE one.

U. S. Takes Option on Old Warehouse in Alexandria

The Government has taken a 90-day option on 40,000 square feet of warehouse space in Alexandria, possibly in connection with the proposed storage depot expansion program recently advanced by the Army Quartermaster Corps, The Post learned yesterday.

The site under opion is the old Charles E. King & Sons Warehouse, at the corner of Cameron and Union Streets, which recently was purchased by the Real Estate Guaranty & Mortgage Co., of Washington. Whether the Government is contemplating sale or rental of the property has not been disclosed.

Plans for renovation of the present warehouse building are being studied by officials of the Quartermaster Construction Corps, although uses to which the structure may be put have not been revealed.

A supplemental defense appropriation bill recently adopted by Congress tentatively allocated the sum of $2,500,000 for construction of 500,000 square feet of warehouse storage space in Alexanderia as one of a dozen expansion projects planned by the Quartermaster Corps. The property now under option may be used temporarily, pending completion of plans for construction of additional storage space within the city, it was indicated.

Wires in 1943 To Be Heard Over, Not Seen

DR. FRANK B. JEWETT
Dials Plastic Phone

With the volume of talk on defense activities spurring developments in transcontinental telephone service, the Nation will be knit into a more efficient network when wires are in underground cables all the way to the West Coast by the end of 1942, Dr. Frank B. Jewett, president of the National Academy of Sciences, said yesterday in an interview in connection with its annual meeting.

West of Omaha, where wires are on poles, underground cables are being projected. With completion expected by the end of next year, "there will be a great maany more telephone circuits than there now are, of course with less chance of delays in getting calls in rush hours," he said, adding that service would be virtually free from interruptions due to storms.

Heads Laboratories

Vice president of American Telephone & Telegraph Co. in charge of research, he is also chairman of Bell Telephone laboratories where several thousand workers are engaged in experiments.

Among the most promising experiments are those in synthetic organic materials, he said. Plastics are potential sources of threads to wind around wires for insulation, in place of some of the silk and other materials now being used, he said.

Eighty-eight scientists had registered yesterday for the meeting which will continue through today.

Noted Organist Urges Modern Church Music

Lamenting human suspicion "of anything that's new," Leo Sowerby, of Chicago, called one of America's greatest organists, yesterday advocated more attention to the newer compositions of church music.

Sowerby will elaborate on his viewpoint at 4 p. m. today at a church music conference and choir festival to be held under auspices of the Washington Cathedral in the Guild Hall of St. Alban's Parish Church, Cathedral Close.

Hiss topic is "Ideals in Church Music. At 11 a. m. Canon Winfred Douglas will take on "Principles and Practice of Hymnal Revision," and "Plainsong" will be discussed by Becket Gibbs. Paul Callaway, the cathedral organist, who organized the conference, will participate in the program.

A choir festival will be held at the cathedral at 8:30 p. m. today at which, Sowerby said, the best trends in the newer church music will be illustrated. The program will include:

"Behold the Tabernacle of God," Healey Willan; "Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis in D Minor," T. A. Walmisley; "Now There Lightens Upon Us," Leo Sowerby, and "Glory and Honour and Laud," Charles Wood.

Norwegian Church Called Intolerant Toward Nazis

Copyright by New York Times

Stockholm, Sweden, April 28.—A new circular letter sent to all Norwegian pastors and religious organizations by Maj. Vidkun Quisling's ministery of church and education, throws new light on the struggle between the Norweigan church (Lutheran) and the Quisling authorities, which is continuing in Norway.

The letter, signed by the "Commission State Counselor" Ragnar Skancke, complains of the Norwegian pastors' attitude toward Maj. Quisling's new order. It demands, "in the name of Christianity," a more "tolerant" attitude toward members of Maj. Quisling's party on behalf of the church.

"In the name of Christianity this intolerance should cease," says the letter. But if it does not cease, boycotting will have "incalculable consequences for the freedom of the church and Christian works among our people," threatens Counselor Skancke.

Big New England Fire Out of Control

Boston (Thursday), April 29 (U.P.).—The largest forest fire to sweep through New England this year was reported "still out of control" early today after it had destroyed about 12,000 acres of woodland in Massachusetts and New Hampshire.

Two houses were known to have been burned in Groton, Mass. Fifty families fled from their homes in Forge Village, and at Marlow, N. H., 15 persons hitched eight horses to trucks used to haul logs and drove to safety through narrow, wooded roads.

Poison Death Ruled Suicide

A certificate of suicide was issued yesterday in the death Sunday night of Robert P. Ashton, jr., 24, who last Wednesday was found in his apartment at 1320 Rhode Island Avenue Northwest suffering from effects of poison. He had been ordered to report for Army induction under selective service that day.

He died in Gallinger Hospital. Police said they found his selective service papers and a poison bottle on a table in his quarters.
